Big boost as plans for youth centre are unveiled

By Marijke Cox

mariike.cox@archant.co.uk

PLANS for a a new youth centre have been unveiled as part of an overhaul of youngsters' services in the district.

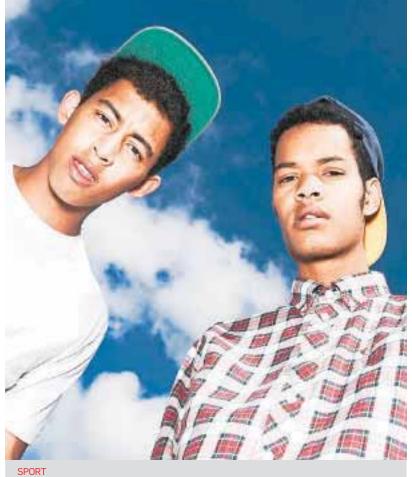

Town hall chiefs at County Hall and Dover District Council said the new centre is expected to be built on land near Tides Leisure Centre with work due to start next year.

It has been agreed the existing Linwood Youth Centre will stay open while the new facility is being developed. KCC's head of integrated youth services, Nigel Baker, said it was an exciting opportunity for Deal's young people.

DDC's deputy leader Sue Chandler added: "I am enormously excited by this announcement of the new youth centre building. We know this will make a real difference to young people in our district."

Planning chiefs said comments and suggestions from local people had played an important part in helping reshape proposals.

KCC's cabinet member for communities Mike Hill said: "We know youth services are dear to many people's hearts and we share that enthusiasm. We wanted to retain this excellent service in the face of the financial pressures of which we are all aware. We believe this plan will deliver high quality youth services and in the case of Deal, they will receive even more than before."

ENTERTAINMENT

Hip-hop duo Rizzle Kicks to perform at Olympic Torch event

EXCITEMENT is building as the district prepares for the Olympic Torch Relay – with hip-hop duo Rizzle Kicks tipped to join in the celebrations.

Dover's Marine Parade is set to come to life on the evening of Wednesday, July 18, when the iconic flame stops overnight on its journey to the capital for the start of the Games, before heading to Deal and Sholden the next day.

Rizzle Kicks – real names Jordon Stephens and Harley Alexander-Sule – are known for their hits Down with the Trumpets and Mama Do the Hump. The rappers announced they will be performing in Dover and at Maidstone's Leeds Castle as part of the Olympic Torch Relay shows, which are being organised by Coca-Cola.

Dover District Council has confirmed the free stage show will be ticketed to ensure residents have priority.

Ticket details will be avaliable from May 17 at www.ticketmaster.co.uk/coca-colacelebrations.

A range of entertainment is arranged by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games and their relay presenting partners Coca-Cola, Lloyds TSB and Samsung. It will include the Rizzle Kicks, acrobatic and dance performances, and Olympic-related activities. There will also be two 10 minute slots of locally programmed entertainment.

Leader of DDC Cllr Paul Watkins said: "This is a great opportunity for people to enjoy a major event, to welcome the torch, and to share in the excitement of the Olympics."

EDUCATION

Hundreds of children kicked out of class for sexual attacks, but KCC defends its procedures

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SHOCK national figures shows Kent has the most schoolchildren removed from class for carrying out assaults of a sexual nature.

A Freedom of Information (FoI) request was made to all the education authorities in the UK asking for details of school-aged children that have carried out these sexual attacks.

And the results make for disturbing reading. It emerged Kent tops the list for the number of offenders, at 705 children that have been expelled or suspended, with Birmingham second on 582, followed by Essex with 451.

In all, almost 15,000 children have been excluded in the last five years for committing sex attacks in schools. Some were as young as four, with more than 1,000 in primary schools.

Not every authority came up with stats to answer the FoI request from The Sun newspaper. It said 148 of 174 local education responded in England and Wales.

Offences included sexual abuse, assault, harassment and lewd behaviour, and include those carried out against both pupils and teachers.

Kent County Council defends the county's high showing saying comparing an entire county with a city like Birmingham gives a distorted figure.

The authority said it is committed to working with children who display sexualised behaviour.

The council said: "We offer specialist advice in this area to schools and carers. A number of our staff have also undertaken specialist training in this field from AIM or Assessment, Intervention and Moving on, a nationally recognised voluntary agency working in this field.

"In every case the school becomes aware of, they have to assess risk and this only leads to exclusion if it is considered that the risk cannot be managed.

"The Kent and Medway Safeguarding Children's Working with Sexually Active Young People provides guidance to schools and other professionals on how to manage and risk assess such incidents of sexualised behaviour.

"It is covered in training for all designated staff in schools, and we urge schools to use the matrix for assessing whether sexualised behaviours cross the threshold for referral to police and CSC."

Project Salus, on behalf of Kent County Council, carries out a number of programmes which tackle behavioural management issues.

SHOCKING: Kent says it has procedures in place

They work with schools, governors, parents and children across Kent to raise the awareness of good practice in anti-bullying work and to support everybody to help reduce the problem.

Its 'Safe School' accreditation has now been running for four years.

Currently 283 Kent schools have achieved or are working towards the accreditation.

Its 'Why Me?' guide for parents offers support

Its 'Why Me?' guide for parents offers support in dealing with their children, but also how to approach the school and get appropriate help to resolve the situation, the council said.

Senior Tory promises to cut police commissioner pay – if he wins post

A SENIOR Kent County Council member is the third Tory to enter the race to be his party's candidate in the Police and Crime Commissioner poll.

Cabinet member for transport and environment Cllr Bryan Sweetland (pictured) says he would provide a fresh approach to the challenges and opportunities faced by Kent Police.

He also vowed to cut the PCC's expected salary of £85,000.

"It is far too excessive in the current period of austerity and out of proportion with other elected positions in Kent," he said.

The 55-year-old, who joined KCC's cabinet around 18 months ago and has been a county councillor for three years, will go up against Iraq war hero Colonel Tim Collins and Medway councillor and chair of the area's Community Safety Partnership Mike O'Brien in the race to become the Tory candidate for November's first PCC election.

He hinted that if elected it was likely he would stand down from his cabinet position.

Cllr Sweetland would not be drawn into commenting on his Tory competitors, but said there was likely be even more candidates in the coming months.

Other potential competitors for the PCC role include Fergus Wilson, who owns hundreds of properties in Kent; Kenneth Little, an independent candidate who lives near Whitstable; and Harriet Yeo, from Ashford, a councillor seeking the Labour Party nomination.

Cllr Sweetland – who describes himself as the "most senior" of Kent's politicians to enter the race – said while he is not a member of the existing Kent Police Authority or a retired officer, his background would enable him to bring a business-like approach to Kent Police.

He said if elected there would be no compulsory redundancies of frontline police officers – although the force cannot make officers redundant. They must choose to voluntarily leave or finish their service.

He stressed the need for partnership working with private and public sector organisations.

"It is possible to save millions of pounds by having a sensible 'joined up' public sector approach to tackle crime in problem areas," he said.

"However, most of my time will be spent listening to local people and translating their concerns and aspirations about policing into action."

Cllr Sweetland spent 30 years in the telecommunications industry, working in America, Europe, Bermuda and the UK.

The PCC will take over from Kent Police Authority in November.

They will have the power to hold the force to account, determine policing strategy, set the budget and issue a five-year policing plan.

The salary is £85,000 and will be paid "irrespective of the number of days worked".

Mothers fear banned weedkiller is to blame for spate of birth defects

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

INTENSIVE tests need to be done to establish if there is a connection between a banned weedkiller found in water supplies with a series of tragic birth defects, says a Tory MP.

Mothers in and around Waterdales in North-fleet, have been told there is a possibility their babies were born with part of their bowl protruding from a hole in the stomach because atrazine was possibly in their drinking water.

The company behind it denies this emphatically, saying there is no evidence to back the claim.

But the Tory MP for Gravesham Adam Holloway said: "There is something that has gone wrong here, and we need to find out what it is."

He says a landfill site, now a public area, may be connected, and suggests that too needs investigating.

Atrazine, a herbicide, was banned in the EU, though it's still used in the USA. The ban was decided in 2004, but not enforced until 2007, to allow use of existing stockpiles.

Worries in the area began when it was realised that over 12 years, nine children were delivered suffering from gastroschisis. It normally affects one in 7.000.

Many studies have been carried out in the USA and apparently none proved conclusively that atrazine caused any problems to humans, let alone birth defects.

Southern Water, the company that supplies the area, said it regularly tests its water.

A spokesman said: "Results of this monitoring has shown that levels of atrazine have been well below the 0.1 microgrammes per litre limit set by the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations."

Sonia Dalton said her daughter Mikka spent five weeks in intensive care after being born with the condition in January, 2009, and still requires daily medication.

She said: "Nothing can be done to help those already affected, but if we can help prevent this happening again, we will continue the fight.

"We have been told there are reports saying high levels of atrazine was found near us, but we know no more than that. Things are progressing, but slowly."

Juliet Green, 39, who lives a few doors away from Ms Dalton said her daughter Courtney, 10, suffers complications related to gastroschisis. She was tube fed for much of her life and suffers from internal bleeding which requires regular transfusions.

Her grandson, born to her daughter Natalie Margetson, 22, has also been affected by gastroschisis, which is not hereditary.

Now, in the most recent case, Chantelle Stevens, 23, who lives in the same street, gave birth two weeks ago to Lily who has gastroschisis and remains in intensive care.

Stella Coffee, 38, who lives nearby, discovered during a pre-natal scan that her baby, due in June, also has the condition.

Sonia said: "There are just too many for it all to be a coincidence."

Stuart Gillings is Ms Dalton's lawyer, and he said: "We know something has happened in this area and are preparing reports and questions we need to ask various organisations. Atrazine is one possibility, but we need to go through every option. This is going to be a long, complex case."

NHS Kent and Medway said: "The public health team is carrying out a thorough investigation to determine if there is a cluster of cases of gastroschisis in the Waterdales area of Northfleet. This involves examining if there are more cases of the particular disease than would normally be expected by comparing the numbers of cases both locally and nationally.

Mr Holloway said: "One of my constituents wrote to me a while back, before he sadly died, saying near to these houses was some sort of dump from years ago. It has to be asked if there is a connection with that. There is no doubt in my mind that there is something in this."

Syngenta, the maker of atrazine, said it recognises the distress of the families, but disputes some reports claiming tests showed dangerous levels of atrazine in the area.

The company said: "In fact, levels detected in

The company said: "In fact, levels detected in the referenced water source supplying the area were well below the regulated level."

The company also pointed out the UK Scientific Committee on Plants found "scientific experts have conducted rigorous studies that have consistently shown that atrazine does not cause birth defects".

→ MP in Murdoch dispute

TORY MP for Folkestone Damian Collins has criticised a key finding in the hacking report which claimed media mogul Rupert Murdoch was "not a fit person" to run a major international business. While Mr Collins, who is on the Commons media select committee, was united with other MPs in criticism towards former executive chairman of News International Les Hinton, former News of the World editor Colin Myler and the paper's ex-head of legal Tom Crone, he did not back the statement about Mr Murdoch's suitability to run a major corporation.

Fight cabbies suspended

TWO taxi drivers caught brawling at a rank outside Sevenoaks rait station have had their licences suspended by the council. Andrew Badger, from Axtaine Road, Orpington, and Mohammed Jabbar from Glyn Davies Close, Dunton Green, were arrested on May 16, 2011. Sevenoaks council suspended Badger's Hackney carriage driver's licence for six months and Jabbar for nine months. Sevenoaks Magistrates' Courts has since upheld the suspensions.

→ Manslaughter conviction

A JURY has convicted Caleb White, 20, of manslaughter following a stabbing in Maidstone last September. White – who was just 19 at the time of the crime – killed Tom Crittenden, 21, with a single stab wound to the chest during an incident in Cornwall Close. He will be sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court on June 15.

ANIMAL CRUELTY

Officials try to quell rumours dogs are being poisoned to death in park

DIED: Sam had to be put down

A COUNCIL has assured dog owners visiting open spaces that a poisoner is not targeting their pets – despite persistent internet rumours.

The RSPCA's Facebook page for its Maidstone branch had postings from people claiming their animals had become ill after walking in Mote Park. Some went so far as to say up to 10 dogs had been poisoned to death in the park by someone liberally dropping rat poison. A message is being distributed on the social networking site Facebook, reading: "Just heard some terrible news, 10 dogs have died this week. Some low life is dropping rat poison at Mote Park.

"My cousin's friend's dog has died so I know this is true.

"By the time they got the dog to the car to take it to the vets it was foaming at the mouth and died. Please avoid Mote Park this weekend x."

The RSPCA started receiving anonymous messages on its Facebook page, so the Maidstone volunteers put up a warning.

An RSPCA spokesman said: "The girl who runs the Facebook page just put up a message saying be careful if you are walking in Mote Park because dogs have been poorly.

"The council then contacted her and said there is no poison in Mote Park and you are scaremongering, so she put the council statement up on the Facebook page.

"We haven't got any names and addresses of people whose dogs have been poorly, but after she put up this thing from the council, another person got in touch saying 'My dog has been very ill after walking in Mote Park'. I think the council has said there is a rat problem there."

Peter Surtees, director of European supplies at Kimberley Clarke at West Malling, said his fouryear-old deerhound Sam died from rat poison, and Mote Park was "number one on the suspect list".

He said: "I had to take him to the emergency vet during the night and sadly we had to make the decision to put him down. I can't believe this has happened – it's very tragic."

Maidstone council said: "We have not received any confirmed reports of dogs and cats being poisoned in Mote Park. No official baiting is taking place in Mote Park.

"The welfare of animals is very important to us and we will be working with the police to find out what is happening and to take necessary action."

And the police said: "We are not investigating anything involving dogs being poisoned anywhere in the Maidstone area, but then we would not always be someone's first port of call if something happened.

"We are aware of this Facebook claim, but as present know no more about it."

Prince Charles flies in to see historic house's restoration works to tackle woodworm threat

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE Prince of Wales made a special visit to Kent this week to learn about a project aimed at saving one of the country's most important historic houses.

Heir to the throne Prince Charles flew in by helicopter to the stunning grounds of Knole in Sevenoaks on Monday, where he met with National Trust chiefs, curator Emma Slocombe, and others involved in the conservation.

The 600-year-old house is undergoing repairs in what is the first phase of a decade-long process to secure its future.

The building – once palace to King Henry VIII and the Archbishops of Canterbury – contains some of the world's rarest and most important collections of furniture, textiles and paintings.

Prince Charles was given a tour of the house, stopping to meet experts and hear about conservation being carried out, including the expertise used to help preserve the upholstered furniture in the Reynolds Room, which contains portraits by 19th century painter Sir John Reynolds.

He took particular interest in the work of house steward Emily Watts and conservation assistant Melinda Hampton, who are responsible for the daily cleaning, checking and treatment on Knole's hundreds of objects.

Ms Watts said: "We keep bags of dust from

ROYAL TOUR: Prince Charles was shown around Knole in Sevenoaks and met several members of staff who explained the vital work being carried out each piece of furniture; it allows us to monitor the cleans. There is as much risk of over-cleaning as under-cleaning due to the damage it can cause. Each piece has its own cycle."

The building, as well as suffering cracked walls and leaking roofs, is also riddled with woodworm.

Insecticide is injected into objects and furniture to treat the problem and the Prince was shown some of the bugs that had come out of a 17th century candlestick holder.

Ms Solcombe presented him with a framed X-ray image of the candlestick holder – showing pest damage and historic repairs, one of a collection to be exhibited at Knole.

During the tour, His Royal Highness, who has a degree in archaeology, met house and collections manager Helen Fawbert who explained upcoming plans to remove panelling in the ballroom and the potential archaeological discoveries it could reveal. Before arriving at Knole, Prince Charles – as the troops' colonel-in-chief – had visited the 1st Battalion, The Royal Gurkha Rifles at Sir John Moore Barracks in Folkestone.

His visit came before the soldiers start a sevenmonth tour in Afghanistan.

The Prince joined a reception for soldiers and their families before laying a wreath at the battalion's memorial. He also presented medals to soldiers for recognition of their work in Afghanistan.

Our beaches named as among best in Britain by seaside guide book

NINETEEN Kent beaches have won a 'recommended' tag from the Marine Conservation Society during a national round-up of Britain's best seasides.

Our winners are Dymchurch, Hythe, Sandgate Beach, Dover Harbour, St Margaret's Bay, Sandwich Bay, Ramsgate Sands, Ramsgate Western Undercliff, Stone Bay, and Botany Bay.

 $Margate's \, Fulsam \, Rock \, and \, The \, Bay, \, Westbrook \,$ Bay, St Mildred's Bay, Westgate Bay, Minnis Bay, Herne Bay – Central, Tankerton Beach and Whitstable West Beach also got the thumbs up.

The society's silver anniversary edition of the Good Beach Guide has recommended 516 out of 754 of the UK's bathing beaches tested last summer as having excellent water quality.

That's especially good as it's eight per cent more than the previous year and the best showing in the guide's 25-year history.

But the society's coastal pollution officer Rachel Wyatt said there was no room for complacency, adding: "This is a milestone for coastal resorts to be proud of and shows the impact of the guide.

"However, this summer will see the first samples taken under the revised Bathing Water Directive which will replace the current standards with far more stringent ones from 2015.

"It's really important local authorities, water companies and environmental regulators don't become complacent and take their collective feet off the pedal of continued environmental improvements.

"If that happens we could see a drop in the number of beaches recommended by us in the future, which could pose a risk to the great reputation that British beaches have.'

The good showing means Thanet has just over 50 per cent of those beaches in Kent now recommended. Thanet District Council's cabinet member. for tourism. Cllr Iris Johnston, said: "This is fabulous news for Thanet. A total of 10 beaches have been recognised by the Good Beach Guide, that's amongst the highest number in the South East.

SHORE THING: Sandgate Beach, near Folkestone

"Being recognised in this way is a great boost to tourism and is a great reminder of the excellent water quality on our beaches.

"We're very proud of our beautiful coastline and hope this will encourage many more people to enjoy what Thanet has to offer.

The conservation society said it works to improve public understanding of the health risks associated with poor bathing water quality and lobbies water companies and environmental regulators to improve sewage discharges around the Kent coast as well as the rest of Britain.

New oak carriage for castle's historic cannon

WALMER Castle's defences were revitalised on Friday when one of its cannons was remounted on a new oak carriage. Its eight cannons are thought to have come to Walmer during the Napoleonic Wars and have stood on the bastions of the castle for 200 years. Conservators used the design of the existing mount as well as research carried out at the Royal Armouries to build a reproduction of the original carriage.

Clarke praise for academy training prisoners for work

By Chrissie Daniels

rissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

CABINET member Kenneth Clarke has visited a new employment training academy that offers "life changing" opportunities for prisoners.

The Secretary of State for Justice, and prisons minister Crispin Blunt, attended the official opening of the Timpson Academy on Monday.

The academy in Goudhurst, will train prisoners in a variety of trades, aiming to boost employment and reduce reoffending.

Prisoners learn the skills used in Timpson shops such as key cutting, shoe and jewellery repair, and photo-processing.

The 10 prisoners selected for the academy will soon be released and Timpson hopes to provide them with jobs in shops across the country.

Lisa, 36, from Wales is serving a 12-year sentence. She said: "I found it difficult speaking to people before the academv. I didn't think anyone would give me a job, I thought

VISITOR: Kenneth Clarke

I would be unemployable.

"People gave me the opportunity and I am so grateful.

"This will be a full-time job when I leave, to enter into in the long term. It's a career for me not just a job.'

The academy has been running for 13 weeks and is next to Blantyre House prison.

The 10 male and female prisoners working there are from Blantyre, East Sutton Park, and Standford Hill prisons.

Timpson does not hire those convicted for sexual offences or who have mental health problems. The trainees work from 9am-5pm, Monday to Friday, and are paid a prison wage.

One ex-prisoner is now working full-time in a Timpson shop, another works on Saturdays.

There are four other Timpson academies across the country, but this is the first one built outside of prison grounds.

Timpson chairman, John Timpson, said: "Out of 200 prisoners only seven have gone back to prison, 92 per cent are still with us after 12 months."

He said 15 of his shops are managed by ex-prisoners.
Mr Clarke said: "The academy epitomises the kind of thing I would like to see in Britain.'

He also talked about pressures on the prison system such as overcrowding and finding the space to provide facilities like the academy.

Blantyre governor Jim Carmichael, said: "If you put prisoners in this environment you can see the confidence because someone's taken a chance on them. They are able to give something back.'

CAMPAIGN

Generous readers help keep elderly alive through winter

By Marijke Cox

marijke cox@archant co.uk

VULNERABLE and elderly people who would usually struggle through the colder months have survived the winter thanks to the generosity of our readers.

Thousands of pounds were raised through Surviving Winter, a campaign led by the Kent Community Foundation (KCF) and Saga, and supported by Archant KOS Media.

The scheme invited well-off households to donate some or all of their £200 winter fuel payment – given tax-free by the Government to every household with a person aged 60 or over – to poorer elderly or vulnerable people.

A total of £15,239 was raised, with £2,450 coming from our readers using the coupon provided in this paper.

Donations helped provide hardship grants for poorer pensioners and fund advice and support groups.

KCF said thank you to this newspaper and its readers for supporting the drive.

Chief executive Carol Lynch said: "We were delighted we managed to raise more than £15,000 for elderly people who struggle with the cold over the winter through our appeal.

"The campaign was driven by the generosity of older members of our community who felt the winter fuel payment was a luxury they could live without and wanted it to benefit others.

"We worked with our charitable networks throughout Kent and redistributed those generous donations to other older people in real need, both as individual hardship funds and as grants to groups to help their members keep warm and well over the winter.

"Fortunately this winter wasn't as bitter as some we have known in Kent, but we were delighted that our funds made a real difference to so many older people's lives."

Each year there are more than 1,000 excess winter deaths in Kent and Medway.

Funds raised went towards projects supporting elderly people in real need, with more than £5,000 given as individual hardship grants. Funding went to Age Concern branches, and paying for nurse time and support services to prevent isolation and loneliness.

Almost £2,300 will be used to fund early projects next winter and KCF hopes to launch an educational project about the importance of preparing for the cold and conserving energy.

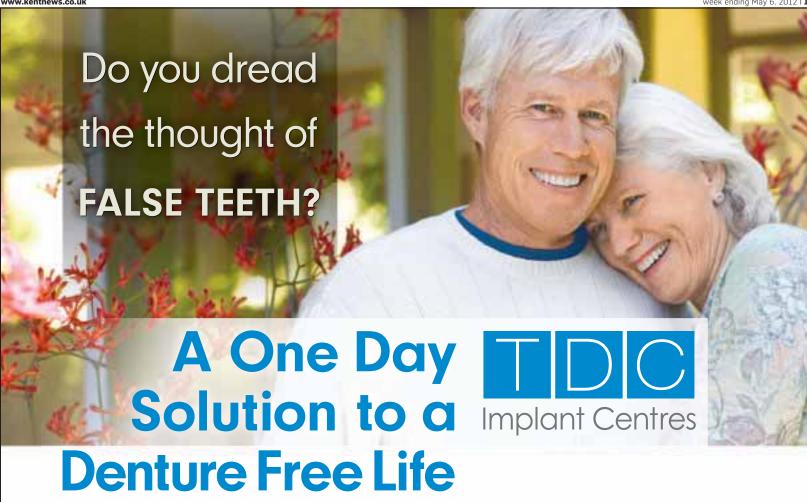

KCF's Annette Fettes said: "I'd like to thank you all at Archant KOS Media once again for your help in running this appeal.

"You certainly helped raise awareness of the issues facing many older people each winter, and as a result generated donations which made winter more bearable for many older people in real need across the county."

Targeting lorry drivers who think they're above the law

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE deadly combination of tiredness and distraction is often to blame for serious traffic accidents.

Add to that mix a multi-tonne heavy goods vehicle and it's even more likely to end in disaster.

But in the past, monitoring lorry drivers has proved difficult, with HGV cabs being so high off the ground police were unable to see inside.

Last year, however, saw Kent Police using an unmarked lorry to allow officers to see what drivers were up to behind the wheel.

And more than 180 drivers found themselves on the wrong side of the law with offences including using hand-held mobile phones, and eating while driving.

In the latest operation of its kind, police took to the road for three days, patrolling the M20 in an unmarked lorry.

A total of 45 offences were dealt with – with fines totalling £2,700 – including using mobile phones, not wearing a seatbelt, and one where the offender was reading a map placed on the steering wheel

Roads policing unit inspector Paul Sellwood said even in last week's wet and treacherous conditions drivers continued to use their phones.

"We have an awful lot of lorries that move through our county from the ports which means we have more risk of collisions involving HGVs and the consequences are often fatal," he said.

GOTCHA: PCs Laura Sloan and Mark Nott

"Car drivers are more aware of getting caught if they are using their mobile or not paying attention. Some lorry drivers think they can get away with it because police can't see them so high up.

"This operation sends out the message that we are clamping down on HGVs, too."

Insp Sellwood added: "All drivers should be warned we constantly police the roads.

"Vehicles are dangerous weapons, especially when drivers are distracted. We will run this operation again, but we also stop drivers every day for these types of offences.

"It's about creating the fear of detection."

Kent Police worked with a local lorry company which loaned the vehicle. Officers looked into drivers' cabs and filmed alleged offences while alerting patrol vehicles to pull offenders over.

Problem solved

Unique Holland Damp Proof System® is a no-mess, natural way to dry out your house

Your damp proofing questions answered

Holland Damp Proofing managing director Evert De Graaf answers your questions about damp and his unique system to treat it.

What are the signs of damp?

Damp is not always easy to spot but telltale signs to look for are a musty smell, stained or peeling wallpaper, bubbling paint, rust marks around nails on skirting boards and mould growth on walls.

Why is it important to treat damp?

It's easy to ignore the signs of damp, but if left untreated it can get much worse, damaging the very fabric of your home and posing serious health risks, especially for those with medical conditions such as asthma or rheumatism.

What can I do about it?

There are many types of damp problems so it's best to leave it to the professionals. You can start by calling Holland Damp Proofing. One of our specialists will give you honest advice and if we think our system is suitable to solve your damp problem we will arrange a free visit. Since we came to the UK in 1999 we have helped thousands of people rid their homes of damp, all with a 20-year guarantee.

How does the Holland Damp Proof System® work?

The system was originally developed in The Netherlands where 60% of homes are built below sea level – so it's got a long and successful history. The idea is simple: draw out the moisture and the damp will disappear. This involves a series of special bricks which are fitted into the external walls of your home. These cleverly allow air to circulate in and out of the wall, drying it out by evaporating the moisture.

Is it suitable for my home?

It doesn't matter whether you have a Victorian terrace, period property, a church...or even a castle...the system is suitable for virtually all types of property including use on cavity, solid, stone and brick walls.

How is it installed?

The system is installed from the outside and is usually fitted in one to two days. We don't use any toxic chemicals in your property for you to breathe in. The work is done by our own engineers (no subcontractors) who are based at our regional branches throughout the UK.

What are the advantages over chemical damp proofing?

The system is a great alternative to chemical damp proofing which can be messy and involve hacking off plaster work on walls inside your home – a big upheaval! Over time chemical barriers will eventually break down... and the damp will come back.

How much does it cost?

The system is an investment to keep your home dry and protected for the future. The cost of installing the Holland Damp Proof System® is similar to chemical damp proofing, but as there will be no mess, no replastering and no repeat treatments you will save money in the long term.

No mess, no problem

THUMBS UP: Mr Foring

MAUREEN Forino and her husband Charlie lived with a damp home for six years, spending a fortune on solutions they believed would work.

Needless to say, nothing did. "It was a nightmare. We had six years of misery," said Mrs Forino.

The Holland Damp Proof System® was installed in their 1930's bungalow in just one day – with no mess or disruption. After two winters, the damp has stayed away – for good.

Railway metal thefts down, but we pick up a larger bill

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

RAILWAY bosses say their campaign against cable theft on the network has seen a decline in the number of raids, but an increase in cost and impact from the thefts.

 $\bar{\text{N}}\text{ew}$ figures from Network Rail for the financial year 2011-12 show there were 12 incidents, down from 17 the previous year.

But those thefts cost the industry, and ultimately the taxpayer and passengers, more than £700,000 in the last 12 months, compared to £400,000 the year before.

Route managing director for Kent, Fiona Taylor, said: "Our massive and sustained effort against cable thieves is beginning to have an effect. The number of crimes is down, but the amount of delays to passengers has increased.

"The figures are still unacceptably high and we firmly believe that, without legal reform, fare-paying passengers will continue to suffer thousands of hours of delays to journeys, with the rail industry paying out millions of pounds in compensation when dealing with these crimes."

Metal theft has grown as the economic situation has worsened, and the Government wants to make cash transactions for scrap to be outlawed, making it tougher for criminals to cash in. Network Rail said it and the rail industry as a whole wants a complete reform of the 1964 Scrap Metal Dealers Act, to help tackle the theft problems.

Substantial sums have been spent in Kent securing sites where electrical cables are exposed which has helped limit theft, and Network Rail has also funded extra British Transport Police officers.

Ms Taylor added: "We are grateful for the public support we receive in reporting suspicious activity – both on the railway and at disreputable scrap dealers.

"It is clear the law needs substantial change in order to take away the easy market for illegal scrap."

And Gary Cooper, head of operations at the Association of Train Operating Companies, said: "Cable theft regularly causes disruption for thousands of passengers and costs the taxpayer millions, so it is good news the Government is cracking down on scrap metal dealing.

"Train companies are working closely with the rest of the industry to tackle the problem, and this is an important step in helping us succeed.

"But further changes to the law now need to be made to create a robust new licensing regime covering all scrapyards, giving police and councils the power to search and investigate them, and to close down any dealers involved in theft."

Food supplies at risk if bee numbers continue to drop

By Chris Murphy

AS IT is revealed that the number of bees in Kent has slumped by half in recent years, one organisation has launched its own fightback.

A report from Friends of the Earth (FoE) found the bee population is in freefall. The sting in the tail means that with fewer of them to pollinate crops, there will be less food and failures of whole eco-systems

And in turn, manual pollination will be required - which will be massively costly.

The green campaigners said farming in Kent and the rest of the South East faces serious risk without urgent Government action to protect the bees.

Saving the bee will not only provide a continuation of current agriculture levels, it will save the taxpayer a fortune, because after all, bees are free.

FoE said bees pollinate

HOME: Bees need extra help around £137.4 million of crop sales in the region, according to research conducted at the University of Reading. But if the bee died out, it would annually cost the country a staggering £1.8 billion to handpollinate crops. That could pay for 60,000 teachers.

The research found Kent has already lost more than half the honey bees in managed hives, and wild honey bee numbers are dropping dramatically.

Solitary bees are declining in more than half the areas they have been studied, and the bumblebee is extinct in the South East. However, a species of the solitary bee, Halictus eurgnathus, thought to be extinct here, is being reintroduced to the South Downs.

FoE wants David Cameron to take action on planning towns, change the way we farm and use pesticides, and fund nature experts to ensure vital bee populations are restored.

And at the North Foreland Golf Club in Broadstairs, staff are working to help the bee.

Manager Dan McGrath has launched Operation Pollinator. to increase the number of pollinating insects and bees on the course. He said: "The greenkeeping team is proud of the work carried, recently installing new nesting sites for bees.

FoE campaigner Paul De Zylva added: "Bees are responsible for most of our fruit and vegetables, so our diet would suffer.'

NHS needs blood to be fit for Olympic Games and Jubilee

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A MASSIVE 30 per cent increase in blood donations is needed in Kent this year to help cope with the Olympics.

NHS Blood and Transplant said it needs to hit a target of 30 per cent more than its usual stock to cope with an expected slump in donor numbers when the Games is on.

It said in the past, even its most regular donors give it a miss during big national events and celebrations as daily routines are disrupted. This, combined with the high numbers of international visitors with a different native blood mix, may also put high demand on specific blood groups.

The high number of public holidays, sporting events and the Queen's Diamond Jubilee celebrations makes forward planning essential to ensure demand can be met.

Active donors are being urged to make an appointment if they are eligible between now

SAVED: Ian Morgan received more than 90 units of blood during his cancer treatment and the start of the Olympics, to help build stocks before the major events begin.

Launching the appeal is cancer sufferer Ian Morgan from Tunbridge Wells, who posed with a body painted donor.

He said: "I always thought it was important, if not a civic duty, to donate blood, but I never expected it would be me who needed it. I had three operations, using more than 90 units of blood in total. I would like to urge as many people as possible to help save lives."

Most in demand in Kent is blood type O+ followed by Oand B- but all donors should turn up as soon as they can with many sessions having extended opening times.

Also, those who haven't donated before and may not know their blood type are encouraged to help build stock levels by making an appointment to start donating now.

The service said regular donations are a vital resource to help treat conditions like cancer, long-term illnesses, plus people involved in accidents and those in maternity care.

Male donors can give four times over 12 months with 12 weeks between donations and women are advised to donate three times a year to protect them from developing health problems such as anaemia.

New and existing donors can visit blood.co.uk or call 0300 123 2323 for an appointment.

Bookies robber locked up

A 40-year-old man from Gravesend has been jailed for eight years for robbing two bookmakers with an imitation gun.

Brett Scott Mullen, (pictured) of Christianfields, was sentenced at Maidstone Crown Court, where he pleaded guilty to two offences of robbery and two of possessing an imitation firearm.

Mullen committed the first robbery at Coral Bookmakers in King Street, Gravesend, on December 23, 2011, when he entered pointed the imitation gun, wrapped in a carrier bag, at a member of staff and demanded cash.

He committed a similar offence at the Coral Bookmaker shop in Bexley on December 28 and was arrested in Gravesend the following day.

In total Mullen stole around £1,300.

Detective Constable Richard Dorey said: "This was a terrifying ordeal for the staff and I'm pleased with the swift actions taken to arrest him and bring him to justice."

EUROPI

MEP's budget appeal

KENT Labour MEP Peter Skinner has called for a Euro budget freeze after the European Commission announced plans for a 6.8 per cent increase in the EU's budget for 2013.

He said: "We have made a real terms cut in the European Parliament's budget for 2013 and I want the overall budget frozen. It's time for other EU institutions and the Commission to play their part in finding savings. In these challenging times we need to promote spending on jobs and growth and make savings in other areas."

The budget must be agreed by member states and the European Parliament by the end of the year.

RESCUE

Big day for Red Cross

THE Red Cross is getting set to open its new base for emergency response operations and community services for East Kent.

The opening ceremony on Tueday at the building in Lower Chantry Lane, Canterbury, will be attended by Julian Brazier MP and the Lord Mayor of Canterbury. Lady Caroline Ure, long-standing volunteer and former president of the Kent Red Cross, will cut the ribbon.

Bradbury House will be a base for British Red Cross emergency response operations in the area and will also be a focal point for the delivery of health and social care, first aid learning, and other humanitarian services.

EXHIBITION

From red carpet stars to famine - Brian Aris has photographed it all

Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT may be easier to complie a list of celebs, royalty, and global hotspots that Kent photographer Brian Aris hasn't snapped, and his fans can enjoy some of his best work at an exhibition in Whitstable.

He is a legend in the world of stills having shot formal portraits of the Queen, visited some of the globe's worst wartorn regions like Sudan and Vietnam, and focused on the starving of Ethiopia.

But few will know his name.

Mr Aris, from Faversham, said: "I have always thought a photographer should be seen and not heard, so I have shied away from doing interviews. I prefer to keep my head down and keep working.

He started with the riots in Northern Ireland in the late 60s, and his pictures went round the world. Then came Princess Anne visiting Sudan. and work with Save the Children Fund in Vietnam and the Middle East. Ethiopia was visited more than once, including with Faversham resident Bob Geldof and the Band Aid Trust.

Mr Aris said: "You say to yourself you will go back to reporting, but it never works out that way.

"I enjoyed my time doing that, but once you depart and get in to that world of celebrity, studio, make-up and hair, it is very hard to then go back. I do miss it, but it is a different world now.

'When I was doing it, a press card and British assport were respected back then. I am not so sure that's the case now - more of a target if anything.

"I have a great respect for the guys who do it they are the finest photographers there are. These guys are unsung heroes - they go out there, work quietly and get their pictures published showing the world what is going on, and the public generally don't know who their names.

'And yet they'll know the name of a fashion photographer who spends all day in a studio with a model, where they should take a good picture.

And so it was for Mr Aris who went on to capture on film the world's best-known faces. His catalogue is now a who's who of fame.

David Bowie, The Police, Sting, The Rolling Stones, The Who, Duran Duran, Spandau Ballet, Blondie, Boy George, Madonna, Annie Lennox, Van Morrison, The Clash and Bob Geldof, have all been at the other end of his lens.

There are record covers for George Michael Sting, Dire Straits, The Human League, Boomtown Rats, Mike Oldfield, Kenny Rogers, Eurythmics, Pet Shop Boys, Moody Blues, Cliff Richard, STARS ON CAMERA:

Brian Aris (bottom) has photographed hundreds of big names, including (l-r) Bromley boy David Bowie: Faversham resident Bob Geldof in Ethiopia; US superstar Madonna: model Twiggy; and the star quests at the wedding of Bob Geldof and Paula Yates, icluding members of the Boomtown Rats. EXHIBITION

Downton Abbey inspiration behind castle's exhibit of real life upstairs and downstairs

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LEEDS Castle really is Kent's own Downton Abbey, say the organisers of a new exhibition set to confirm and dispel more than a few myths about life upstairs and downstairs.

During the last year, as castle staff relaxed in front of the TV on Sunday nights, they experienced a rather odd sense of déjà vu.

Being played out in both Downton Abbey, and the remake of the classic Upstairs Downstairs, were stories which mirrored exactly those of Leeds Castle in the early 20th century when Lady Baillie owned the castle.

Staff were so struck by the parallels they have developed an exhibition to show what life was really like on the two floors of the castle.

It is called What the Butler Saw and is now running at the castle near Maidstone highlighting the hidden stories of lives above and below stairs.

Led by heritage manager Nic Fulcher, and drawing on archive records, memoirs and research, and with period costume and artefacts to bring the stories to life, for the first time the stories of the servants will be told alongside those of their masters and mistresses.

'Upstairs' stories include Lady Baillie, who was born Olive Paget in 1899, the daughter of an English peer, Lord Queenborough, and an American heiress, Pauline Whitney.

Olive grew up in fantastic luxury; at 16 she had a cheque book, a chauffeur driven car and an independent life.

But when World War One came, she became a nurse, helping in the convalescent homes established by her father to support wounded officers and soldiers.

And 'downstairs' there were more than 40 indoor staff before the outbreak of World War Two.

tle. But that marriage also ended in divorce in 1931, when she married

Sir Adrian Baillie, a Scottish baronet with political aspirations.

They were led by a butler and a housekeeper alongside maids, governesses, nannies and a Belgian chef. There were a further 40 or so staff employed on the estate, as agricultural workers, gardeners, chauffeurs and grooms.

The garage yard, with 10 garages either side, each accommodating three cars, for not only estate vehicles but the cars of weekend guests, had accommodation for young menservants built above it.

In the castle itself, male and female servants were accommodated in a staff floor behind the battements of the castle; the housekeeper's rooms were in the middle, preventing any 'goings on'.

On hot summer nights, the maids often slid their mattresses out onto the castle roof to sleep.

Many of the maids came from Eastern Europe and staff were often shared with the London house.

Even in the 1950s, the girls had to be in by 10pm when they had their day off, and the housekeeper instructed the gatekeeper to lock them out if they were late.

■ What the Butler Saw runs until October 21, daily except July 14. For more information, visit www. leeds-castle.com.

29 snakes worth £20k are stolen from shed

SOME 29 royal python snakes worth £20,000 have been stolen from a shed in Sheerness. The theft happened overnight on April 28 from St Georges Avenue. Det Con Andrew Payne said: "The snakes don't just have a high monetary value, but they have significant sentimental value, too. The conditions in which the snakes should be housed are quite specific and harm could come to them if they are not looked after properly."

Twilight showings to give real Spitfire experience

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

EVER wondered what a genuine Spitfire sounds and looks like when the massive Merlin engine is fired up at twilight?

Soon it will be easy to find out, as a series of public open days are being held at Biggin Hill, which has taken delivery of a small fleet of the iconic war machines.

It has been 53 years since a Spitfire has been based at the famed World War Two airbase, and now three of them will be back at their spiritual home.

One of the organisers, Robin Brooks said: "We want to hold a series of twilight open evenings so people can come along and sit in the aircraft to see just what it was like during those dark days of the Battle of Britain.

"But we will also fire up the engines so you can clearly see the long blue flames literally spitting out of the exhaust pipes.

"There is nothing like the sound of a Merlin engine up close and personal, and we want to share these aircraft with the public, rather than lock them away in hangers so no-one gets to enjoy them."

The Spitfire Company (Biggin Hill) Ltd is the dream of a Kent man who has a long association with flying Spitfires. Peter Monk, from Pembury, set up the business at the Biggin Hill Heritage Hangar.

He is already known as the owner of a Spitfire Mark 9 called the Kent Spitfire, and named Spirit of Kent. This iconic aircraft has performed at venues throughout the country and remains a firm favourite at many displays.

Now it is joined by a rare Mark IA Spitfire, tagged X4650 KL-A; another Mark 9 Spitfire from Canada, marked MK912, called Borough of Bromley; and a Mark 16 Spitfire, TE184.

All those additional aircraft meant Mr Monk needed to lease a hangar at Biggin Hill.

And as if that's not enough, more Spitfires are scheduled to join the company over the next few months.

Mr Monk said: "With the sad demise of the annual air fair here, the establishment of the heritage hangar will certainly put Biggin Hill back where it belongs on the vintage aviation map of the UK."

The Heritage Hangar is due to be launched in June.

SPITIRUAL HOME: Three Spitfires are to be based in the Heritage Hangar at Biggin Hill Airport, where members of the public will be able to experience the full effect of their engines being started

Italians get a taste of Garden of England as Kent Crisps go on sale in Rome bars

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

KENT Crisps are being exported to the land of la dolce vita, with bars in Rome giving their customers a taste of the Garden of England during the traditional cocktail hour.

It is the first time Kent Crisps have been exported since the award-winning brand was launched a year ago by Quex Foods, based in Birchington.

The company has delivered more than 7,000 packets to leading British-style bars in Rome, including The Albert in the Via del Traforo, and The Lord Litchfield in Via Luca Valerio.

Many bars in the capital follow the tradition of serving customers during the earlyevening aperitivo, when Italians tour the bars, socialise over cocktails and enjoy complimentary finger food before going to dinner.

Anthony Curwen, managing director of Quex Foods, said: "We have already exceeded our sales expectations and this is another first for us.

"Now ex-pats seeking a taste of home as well as Italian citizens exploring British culture can enjoy the unique flavours of the Garden of England."

Hand-cooked and made from potatoes grown in the county, Kent Crisps reflect the tastes and landscapes of the county.

Flavours include oyster and vinegar; award-winner Ashmore cheese and onion; sea salt and Biddenden cider vinegar; and sea salt.

Kent Crisps are on sale at selected Waitrose stores, farm shops, cafés, delis, pubs, village shops and tourist attractions nationwide.

Sales help to maintain Quex Park, one of Kent's historic estates, and the world renowned Powell-Cotton Museum, plus other attractions.

The company is based at the 250-acre country park complete with 18th century Regency house. The estate has won awards for conservation and is a haven for wildlife.

Power lines to be removed from beauty spot

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A LEADING power company is investing millions in burying electricity cables to protect stunning countryside, raising hopes it could spell an end to unsightly overhead wires.

The mile-long electricity lines in Hucking, located in the Kent Downs Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB), are being removed by UK Power Networks and replaced with underground cables.

It forms part of a £6.6m scheme to bury power lines between 2010 and 2015.

The Hucking project, which will cost £352,000, is the latest of seven to be carried out across Kent in a bid to protect nationally important landscapes.

Lamberhurst, St Margaret'sat-Cliffe, Cobham Park, White Horse Wood Country Park in Detling, Ightham Mote, and Throwley near Faversham, have all seen similar projects, totaling more than £1m.

UK Power Networks' protected areas project officer Shaun Barrell said the Hucking

OUT OF SIGHT: Overhead electricity cables are to be buried to restore the natural beauty of the area power lines had stood since the 1960s and were visible from public viewpoints.

"It is a popular area of countryside so we are pleased to be playing our role in enhancing the landscape for future generations," he said.

Rural campaigners, who fear huge swathes of countryside being destroyed by pylons and cables, hope it paves the way for more underground cabling. A controversial debate began last year when Protect Kent, the county's branch of Campaign to Protect Rural England (CPRE), raised concerns over plans by the National Grid to build pylon developments — usually measuring 130ft to 180ft high—across rural landscapes.

Although National Grid would not confirm routes, conservationists outlined two; one running from Rowden, near Croydon through west Kent to Lydd – which was eventually blocked by the Government – and the other from Canterbury to Richborough.

While activists campaigned for underground cabling, the National Grid argued the costs would be considerably more than overhead power lines.

A report by the Infrastructure Planning Committee published earlier this year found burying cables would cost from £10m-£24m over a 40-year period compared to £2m-£4m for overhead lines.

JAMIE WEIR, PROTECT KENT

But this latest investment by UK Power Networks has given conservationists hope that firms are leaning more towards underground cabling.

Spokesman for Protect Kent Jamie Weir said: "The countryside is something that will be cherished by future generations and it is therefore critical that we get more of this investment to safeguard our beautiful landscapes.

"The fact UK Power Networks is able to make this undergrounding cost effective shows it is not too expensive to do. We hope to see many more pylons which blight our countryside moving underground in the near future."

Tim Owen, from Kent Downs AONB, said removal of the power lines in Hucking would enable some of the areas to be planted with new trees to provide continuous blocks of woodland in the future.

"This will give a more natural feel to the landscape and allow the woodland habitat to become more continuous and complete," he said.

Woodland Trust site manager for the Hucking estate Clive Steward said the area contained ancient woodland, which has existed for hundreds of years. He said: "The removal of the power lines will enable visitors to appreciate the true beauty and history of these woods."

Jane Austen's letters go on display as new archive centre opens

By Phil Scrivener

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS the Kent History and Library Centre in Maidstone opened its doors last week, one of five letters that Jane Austen wrote to her niece in Kent was among the archive treasures on show.

Jane Austen's love for Kent stemmed from her family's strong links with the county.

Perhaps her favourite place here was Godmersham Park, near Canterbury, close to the North Downs Way in the Stour Valley, which has changed little since the author's time, 200 years ago.

She often visited her brother Edward's country home and estate there after he inherited it in 1812.

Jane was obviously taken with the surroundings.

On arriving at Godmersham in June, 1808, she wrote: "The country is very beautiful. I saw as much as ever to admire in my yesterday's journey."

Previously, on occasions, Jane had stayed nearby with her parents and sister Cassandra, or her brother Frank.

On one evening, she says: "We dined at Goodnestone and in the evening danced two country dances... we supped there, and walked home at night under the shade of two umbrellas.'

Edward and his young wife spent their early married life on the Goodnestone estate, before moving to nearby Godmersham, and Jane was a regular guest. She began writing Pride and Prejudice after staving at Goodnestone in 1796. When Edward had established himself at Godmersham, Jane also visited nearby Chilham.

She dined there in 1813, remarking: "As I must leave off

POPULAR: Jane Austen's letter is on display in the new Kent History and Library Centre being young, I am put on the sofa near the fire and can drink as much wine as I like.'

At this time, Jane also visited the then new Canterbury prison with her brother Edward.

She frequently visited the cathedral city to shop, pay morning calls and possibly even went there to dance.

When not visiting Kent, Jane would still write at length from her home in Hampshire to her niece, Fanny Knight, Edward's daughter, who was living at Godmersham Park.

Five of these personal letters are held by the Kent History and Library Centre. They provide a fascinating insight into Jane's thinking and attitudes towards young love.

As her relationship with her niece was so close, Jane offers Fanny guidance about her feelings for her admirers.

In the first two letters, written in 1814. Jane initially tells Fanny: "Your mistake has been one that thousands of women fall into. He was the first young man who attached himself to you. That was the charm and most powerful it is."

However, later on, Jane is adamant that Fanny must give up the man.

'Anything is to be preferred or endured rather than marrying without affection; and, if his deficiencies of manner strike you more than all his good qualities, if you continue to think strongly of them, give him up at once," she says, re-ferring to John Pemberton Plumptre, of Fredville.

Iane's writing is neat, precise and fills the letter pages. She signs herself 'Yours most affectionately J. Austen,' and includes the address before folding the letter for posting.

Fanny Knight later married Sir Edward Knatchbull, and the letters she held were part of the Knatchbull family archive passed on to Kent County Council for safe keeping 50 years ago.

Jane would dine at the Bull and George, in Dartford, where she describes how her writing and dressing boxes were packed off in another carriage by mistake, and were heading for the West Indies. Fortunately, they were quickly retrieved.

In east Kent, Jane got to know other notable properties including Eastwell Park, near Charing, and Sandling, near Hythe.

Her family connections had also taken her into west Kent. At the age of 12, she had visited The Red House in Sevenoaks. where Francis Austen, her father's elderly uncle, was living.

He paid for Jane's father George to be educated at Tonbridge Grammar School, where he later taught.

You can take a guided walk around Tonbridge to visit other places in the town with Austen family links. Borrow the audio guide from Tonbridge library, or visit the website www.kent. gov.uk/explorekent.co.uk.

Give the unemployed a chance

Alan Jefferies says it's time for a change in thinking by both employers and job seekers when it comes to the benefits of offering unpaid work

MANY people seem to think job seekers are lazy scroungers, sponging off the government.

However the reality of trying to carve out a career in a tough job market is more difficult than many appreciate.

Our company has had a few problems where we have tried to help the unemployed.

The Coalition's commitment to getting people into work is admirable, but is this unpaid work scheme the right way to do it?

Clearly the unemployed don't seem to be responding.

Similar schemes have not worked in other countries, and there is evidence that coercing people into unpaid training or work masks rather than solves the unemployment crisis.

So why would we do it then? Because we think we should, and there is not much else being offered.

But are employers abusing the system? Clearly some are offering no training and getting manpower on the cheap.

My company is now reviewing the money are we investing in this scheme.

This is because of the waste in interviewing potential staff/trainees who don't give the training any chance.

They come with a view that we are getting them on the cheap or the training has no value to them. Too many bail out before they understand what we are doing as a business and what we are offering.

Many want an instant well-paid job but don't have the skills to function at the most basic levels.

For example, street English may be acceptable in the pub, but not on the telephone to our customers.

Some younger trainees are too busy telling each other about their life histories, or trying to prove they don't need a job, whereas older trainees can believe they have already learned about it all at the 'university of life'.

They fail to understand that what is being offered is a new start with a future.

No doubt most unemployed really do want to work but far too many think that being on the dole is their life, and what's the point of learning something new?

Maybe the way benefits are offered need to be amended; it shouldn't be a way of life but a system to help those in need. It should not just go through the motions to meet pointless targets, but actually help people to get life-changing work.

Far too often we have trainees who find their training with us is misinterpreted by an offical body as real work and this benefit is halted or that benefit is not paid. We then lose the trainee while this is being sorted out.

It's not fair on us because we

Many want an instant well-paid job but don't have the skills lose the time we are investing and it's not fair on the unemployed trainee.

OK, so what do we offer?

The minimum anyone who completes our training will get is a letter of reference, experience of the call centre industry, an introduction to marketing, and – most importantly – a methodology example of how to sell themselves to win over future employers.

The best they can expect is a job with a future and an opportunity to progress as we progress. A job with value, a job we both invested in.

We know great people are out there who want jobs, but why is it proving to be so difficult to find them?

So, we operate unemployed training – but should we? Yes we should, everyone needs a chance.

KOS COMMENT

The public face of cuts to the policing budget

OVER the past couple of years we've all heard about deep cuts to public services, but up until now, those made to the police force – while hitting staff and officers hard – have gone relatively unnoticed to the public eye.

But as pointed out by the chairman of the Kent Police Federation, lan Pointon, these latest cuts involving the potential closure of police stations and counters will shows what we've all been worrying about.

While some police counters only see a few people a day, to take them away will remove a point of contact in a trauma.

Not everyone is as clued up on social networking and multi-media as others, especially the elderly. For some people, removing this face-to-face facility is the same as cutting a frontline service.

IT didn't take long after Roy Hodgson was even suggested as the new England manager for some of the press to turn on him. But Hodgson, who started his career in Kent, needs the fans to be behind him.

So give him a break, otherwise we'll have no-one to blame but ourselves if his team are humiliated at the Euros.

BBC at a loss without Kaddy

I HAD noticed we had been seeing less of Miss Kaddy Lee-Preston on our screens recently, and I no longer watch Inside Out now that it has another presenter.

But I was still astonished to read in your paper that she had left the BBC.

How sad, she was Scene South East's (or whatever it is now called) greatest asset.

Elizabeth Lonkhurst, Folkestone

All aboard this PC gravy train

I'M ALL in favour of elected and accountable officials, and a police commissioner appears a good start.

However, what about costs: his/her salary of £80,000 is only a start. They'll need a staff of how many - obviously - and a suite of offices, no doubt. And so off we go on another gravy train. Add in the costs of those people made redundant, (before they reapply for their new positions in the newly constituted organisation) and we're looking at £5 million a year. There will be redundancies won't there?

Not yet another layer of administration, surely?

Edward Baker, Tunbridge Wells

We must save craftsmanship

KENT County Council leader Paul Carter's article (Opinion, April 29) talks about the deal between business and government, and the necessity to cut red tape where it is impeding progress.

Here is a suggestion... For more than 45 years I have lived in and renovated a number of listed family houses in the county, in four local authority areas. It is a passion of mine to bring rundown historic buildings back to life.

With sadness I have seen the decline in third/fourth generation builders prepared to train craftsman apprentices.

This seems to be due to unwillingness to put themselves at risk from the 'rights' of new employees, and from the increased oversight of planning authorities and building control.

Kent has more listed buildings than any other county in the UK.

Can Cllr Carter convene a meeting open to any associated with this important local grassroots industry to establish where there may be impediments to growth and the steps that may be taken to alleviate those impediments.

David Northcroft, Ashford

Waste of cash and energy

I READ with interest and anticipation your article (April 22) regarding AmicusHorizon and Swale Heating attempting to reduce energy consumption at Rushden.

Whilst energy saving is important, unfortunately the economics of the scheme make no financial sense.

To spend an average of £38,0 $\hat{0}$ 0 per per property to possibly save £500 per year is on a scale similar to Green Party windmills.

One has to accept that fuel bills will rise in future, but the scheme will never pay for itself by a huge margin.

Surely a better investment could have been made?

This expenditure follows typical public sector financial rigour, a major reason why the country is in such a mess.

John Hardy, Mersham

Go before it's too late, David

I SEE the latest rumour going around is that Prime Minister David Cameron is thinking of defecting to the Lib Dems.

I surely hope this is true, because he is nothing like the kind of Consevative that I voted for.

Cameron and his kind are destroying the Conservatives and unless he changes, or they change him, and keeps the promises he made at the last election there is no doubt we will be back to another dose of the other awful crowd.

RE Tucker,

Rev shows a lack of faith

I WAS disturbed to read in your edition of April 21 of a Kent clergyman (of all people) passing judgment on Anders Behring Breivik, the Norwegian man charged with the murder of 77 young people.

While my heart goes out to Rev Kirby's Norwegian family and, indeed, to the loved ones of all those who died, and I would not for one moment condone what Mr Breivik did. I do not find it appropriate for an Englishman, far less a clergyman, to condemn him.

Address: Apple Barn, Smeeth, Kent TN25 6SS

Since the murders last July, the Norwegian people have shown great restraint and maintained a sense of equilibrium in endeavouring to come to terms with what happened.

This is a reaction often witnessed in other continental European countries when facing an incomprehensible crime (such as in Belgium. with the crimes of Mark Dutroux).

Sadly, in Britain, even long before John Major's shortsighted pronouncement about understanding and condemnation, we have been all too eager to condemn people.

MECENYE CARN ON THE SHOT SLOPE SHOPLE & BASIN TALE: Our report on the story

THE GOLD EXCHANGE

It is true that Breivik has admitted to the murders, but vilification of him will not bring those young people back and it is for Norwegian society to decide how to deal with him.

I am saddened to think that Rev Kirby does not even hope for a change of heart and the ultimate redemption his church offers all sinners.

I am no church-goer, but I was brought up in the Anglican faith. Even today, when I hear or read of such lynch-mob pronouncements, I am reminded of so many edicts from the Bible ("Let him who is without sin cast the first stone"; "If another believer sins, rebuke that person; then if there is repentance, forgive. Even if that person wrongs you seven times a day and each time turns again and asks forgiveness, you must forgive").

I urge Rev Kirby to reconsider his position and to use his training to good end in supporting his wife's family's needs in this dark hour, rather than passing judgments that he is not qualified to make.

Taking care that mum's pension is used wisely

MY MOTHER lives in a residential care home, and because of her complex needs she is now fully funded. Is she entitled to retain her full state pension?

ACCORDING to the charity Age UK, your mother's right to a state pension is not affected by the fact that she now lives in a care home.

However, as you might expect, if the local authority helps with her care home fees, then when the amount of assistance is calculated her pension is taken into account along with any other income she might have.

Savings and any other capital are also taken into account in deciding whether any help is due and if so, then how much.

So, although your mother's pension is not reduced, some of it might be expected to be paid towards the fees, which has the same result of reducing her net spendable income.

On the other hand, so-called 'fully funded' care is the expression used when someone's main reason for being in a care home is because of a health condition.

In these circumstances, the NHS is responsible for the care home fees, paid through the local primary care trust, and Age UK advises that if your mother is eligible for NHS continuing healthcare, then this should have no effect on her state pension.

MY WIFE and I invest £20 a month into unit trusts for each of our two grandchildren, and we have been doing this for some years

Our daughter and her husband are not aware of this. We planned to hand over the investment to each child at 18.

A friend has now warned that if we die before then, the units will count towards our estate and 40pc could be taken in inheritance tax. Is this true? If so, what can we do about it?

IF YOUR daughter has no idea that the units exist, then I imagine you and your wife have been investing in your own names.

If so, your friend is right. There would be nothing to show that these units are not part of your own savings, and subject to inheritance tax along with everything else that you own.

Of course, a lot depends on the size of your estate, and there are exemptions.

For example, no tax is charged on bequests from one spouse to the other.

But after exemptions and allowances have been used up, anything you leave above £325,000 is indeed taxed at 400c.

My advice is to contact the unit trust company. It probably has a scheme for setting units aside as a gift that would fall within your annual gifts exemption of £3,000. This would take the units out of your estate and beyond the reach of the taxman.

I BUY and sell pop memorabilia on eBay as a hobby. It started when I sold my collection of vinyl records, and now I deal in autographs, programmes, and similar souvenirs.

Mostly I plough the money back into buying anything that looks like a bargain.

Can you confirm that I do not need to declare this for tax, please?

IT SEEMS to me that you have crossed the line from pursuing a hobby and have become a trader, which means you could be liable for income tax.

Broadly speaking, if you sell anything that you have owned for some time, and you did not buy it in the first place to make a profit, then the taxman is not interested.

This is exactly what you did with your old records.

But you buy items now if they are a bargain, which suggests you hope to sell them at a profit.

You also say that you 'deal' in memorabilia, and the tax inspector will take this to mean you are a trader.

The bad news is that HM Revenue & Customs is investigating dealers who appear regularly on sites such as eBay.

The good news is that you can escape the worst penalties if you contact the taxman voluntarily by June 14.

After this, HMRC will be tracking down traders and the usual penalties and interest will apply.

I HAVE received a demand for arrears of tax from 2007-08 and I need to check this.

How much would I have been allowed to earn before paying tax in that year?

THE income tax personal allowance for that year was £5,225.

Tax then started at 10pc on the next £2,230 of your income, before rising to the basic 22pc rate.

First-time buyer basics make for a happy home

ADAM AIKEN offers a few pointers that will make the idea of buying your first home not such a daunting one...

BUYING your first home is likely to be one of the biggest steps you will ever take.

Perhaps it is not quite as lifechanging as getting married or becoming a parent, but it's still up there as a major event.

As such, it can be quite daunting. For many people, owning a home is something that only 'older people' do, and the realisation that it is time for the next generation to step on to the property ladder can be a real coming-of-age moment.

So it is important to take your time when you go through the process. It may be an exciting period of your life, but make sure you do not rush it.

How much can you borrow?

Before you start house-hunting, find out how much you can afford to borrow.

"It is important to think about your current monthly outgoings – knowing you can meet your payments every month makes having a mortgage far less stressful." said Chris Smith, of Yorkshire Building Society.

Jayne Walters, a spokesman for the Council of Mortgage Lenders, said: "If you are looking to buy your first home, you need to have saved a good-sized deposit to get a mortgage.

"Although products with small deposits are available, as are schemes to help first-time buyers and other borrowers buy properties, the best rates will be found with larger deposits.

"All lenders have different criteria, so shopping around or using a broker can help you work out the most suitable mortgage."

A mortgage lender will look at your budget to gauge what you can afford to borrow. In order to ensure you don't find yourself committed to repayments you cannot meet, you may be taken through an affordability check that will look at your salary and monthly outgoings.

and monthly outgoings.

It is important to tell the truth at this stage. An affordability test is to help you as much as the lender, because if you end up unable to afford your mortgage repayments, you will risk seeing your home repossessed.

Sometimes a lender will give an 'agreement in principle' – an indication of what you could borrow. This will help guide you towards properties in the appropriate price bracket and reduce the risk of being disappointed further down the line.

SHOPPING AROUND FOR BEST DEALS

THE days of 100 per cent mortgages have long gone, and millions of people have found it harder to get on the housing ladder in recent years – even as mortgage rates have hit historic lows.

Borrowers who want to secure the best rates now need to have sizeable deposits to put down.

The best rates are reserved for people who can put down deposits of 25pc or more. This gives them access to 75pc loan-to-value deals – in other words, mortgages that advance no more than 75pc of a property's value.

Of course, this is far from realistic for many people, but it is nevertheless worth saving as much as you can.

"It's an uphill battle, but there are some good rates out there," said Mr Ossei, at Uswitch.

"Some providers, such as Nationwide with its Save to Buy accounts, even bundle together a savings account with a competitive interest rate and a mortgage for first-time buyers.

"What's vital is that first-time buyers make their money work as hard as possible by shopping around for the best savings rate available."

Lending to first-time buyers seems to be on the increase, partly thanks to initiatives such as a stamp-duty holiday and the Government-backed NewBuy scheme.

The most recent statistics from the Council of Mortgage Lenders, which relate to market activity in February, show that more than 14,000 loans worth a total of £1.7 billion were taken out by first-time buyers during the month.

That represented a monthly rise of eight per cent in the number of new mortgages and a six per cent rise in overall value.

More significantly, the figures were up by 18 and 21 per cent on an annual basis.

Mike Cook, head of mortgages at the Post Office, said: "First-time buyers are the life blood of the property market and challenging stories about first-time buyers and wider economic issues have not dampened aspirations to get on the housing ladder.

"It is also interesting to see that despite the resurgence of 10 per cent deposit mortgages recently the average first-time buyer is aiming for the cheaper rates available with 15 or 20 per cent deposits, even if it takes that bit longer to save."

"If you're moving to an area you don't already know very well, take the time to visit and research the surroundings thoroughly," said Mr Smith, at the Yorkshire.

When you have found an area or a property that you like, make a few return visits at different times of the day and week. You may discover that the nice quiet pub at the end of the road becomes a rowdy nightspot on Saturday, for example.

Research by HSBC has found that many first-time buyers are ignoring some of the practicalities of owning homes

Although things such as a property's location and local amenities were often taken into account, the bank found that issues including plans for further development in the area, the condition of nearby properties, and signs of subsidence were often overlooked.

These are all things that can affect the future value of your new home, and Peter Dockar, head of mortgages at HSBC, warned against naivety.

"It is important that first-time buyers consider more than just their immediate desires when looking for their first homes, otherwise they could well be in for a financial headache further down the line," he said. www.kentnews.co.uk week ending May 6, 2012 | 39

'Spend this money to help rescue our struggling towns'

EXCLUSIVE by Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A TOTAL of £300,000 is available to help rejuvenate Folkestone and Hythe town centres - but the money is going to waste, according to campaigners in the area.

Members of the local Labour Party are calling on Shepway District Council and Hythe Town Council to act quickly and use the cash to help businesses facing closure.

A recent study of Hythe town centre by Business Week revealed that many traders feared they would no longer be in business by the end of the year.

Currently £100,000 of Government cash from the High Street Innovation Fund is available for Shepway as a whole, and a further £200,000 is available under a Section 106 planning agreement relating to the new Sainsbury's store in Hythe - a development that many say has made life even tougher for high-street retailers. This money has been earmarked for town-centre improvements.

Matthew Hillyer, of Hythe Labour Party, is calling for action after talking to traders.

He said: "From my understanding, the £100,000 has arrived with a set of guidelines but without any specific contractual terms and conditions, or as yet any committee to process and evaluate applications. Is this fund just for empty shops, or can struggling existing shopowners apply? What are the targets and how will it be distributed? Will a specific amount be used to provide new jobs?

'A sum of £200,000 was made available for town-centre improvements by Sainsbury's in 2009, yet as of today there is only one accepted application for some of this money -£5,000 for a new town board.

"Why have the businesses and shoppers not been consulted on how this money should be invested? Why has it remained largely untouched for close to three years?

"I am astounded that a staggering 94 per cent of traders we surveyed said they had never been consulted on how it should be spent, while others told us they did not know the money even Shepway District Council said this week that it was looking at ways to spend the £100,000 effectively, pledging it would be used to help revitalise shopping facilities.

"We know that empty shops can spoil the attractiveness of a town and any help we can get to tackle this is very welcome," said Alan Clifton-Holt, cabinet member for the economy.

He said it was essential the money was put to the best possible use and the council's first step would be to draw up a plan to target spending.

SPEND IT!

Business Week has highlighted the plight of many retailers in Hythe high street... Shepway District and Hythe Town councils are now being urged to use £300.000 available for improvement

He said: "This could include supporting business rate discounts for new start-up businesses that take on empty properties, or working with landlords to encourage them to also contribute to a business rate discount for new occupiers.

"How we use the money needs careful planning. We will be drawing together people from across the council as well as partners to ensure that it's put to the best possible use.

The High Street Innovation Fund is one of a packet of measures announced by MP Grant Shapps in response to the High Street Review from Government retail guru Mary Portas.

Shepway council is one of 100 authorities across the country to receive funding. It agreed that Section 106 money was part of the Sainsbury's planning agreement in Hythe but said that as a legal agreement it was highly specific.

Shepway council's share of the money (£170,000) must be spent on "improvements to the public realm", while £30,000 allocated to Hythe Town Council is earmarked for activities and promotion.

A council spokeswoman said that several applications had already been processed.

Fashion-conscious shoppers boost designer outlet's sales and footfall

McARTHURGLEN'S Ashford Designer Outlet has reported year-on-year increases in sales of 16.3 per cent and footfall of 21.8 per cent for the Easter weekend.

Sales rose by 75.5 per cent compared with the same four-day period last year as shoppers sought power pastels, florals and vintage paisley prints with savings of up to 60 per cent from designer brands such as Jaeger, Ted Baker, Kurt Geiger and Superdry.
Accessories sales also proved particularly strong, showing an 88 per cent increase compared with the first quarter last year.

David Madison, centre manager at McArthurGlen Ashford, said: "With a leading offer of more than 80 designer and high-street brands, we are in a strong position to capitalise on the growing number of shoppers seeking the best fashion for less.

"Consumers today are looking to invest their money in top-quality products, and the breadth of our fashion offering from Ted Baker and Calvin Klein, to Fat Face and Superdry, provides them with premium fashion for up to 60 per cent less."

Jaye Thompson, fashion expert, said: "In this challenging economic moment, it's not that people have stopped buying fashion, it's just that they're asking more from the fashion they're buying.

This is all part of the trend for 'investment dressing' - choosing and wearing fashion pieces that offer longevity and value for money."

Ferry company doubles service

DFDS Seaways and LD Lines have launched a second vessel to sail on its Dover-Calais route.

The new vessel, named as the Deal Seaways, will bring the total number of daily sailings out of Dover to Calais to 10.

The second vessel has been chartered from Brittany Ferries and was known as the Barfleur before being renamed ahead of the launch.

Chris Newey, passenger director for the English Channel at DFDS Seaways, said: "We have been really pleased with the uptake of the new route between Dover-Calais and are delighted to be able to respond to demand with the launch of the second vessel, therefore doubling the number of crossings.

"We're confident our customers will benefit from the flexibility of sailing times, as well as still having the option to travel to Dunkirk.'

TRANSPORT Continental train link sees rise in popularity

EUROSTAR, the high-speed rail service between the UK and mainland Europe, has reported a positive start to the year, with continued growth in sales revenues and passenger numbers.

In the first quarter, sales revenues rose by 7 per cent from £197 million to £211

Passenger numbers also saw an increase to 2.24m in Q1 from 2.15m in the same period last year.

The growth over the last three months has been driven by an increase in leisure travel, with business travel in the first quarter of the year remaining broadly flat compared with 2011.

Nicolas Petrovic, chief executive of Eurostar, said: The year got off to a strong start, with sales revenues and passenger numbers on the up.

"Our core destinations continue to be a big draw for passengers, but we have also seen particularly good take-up of our Amsterdam fares as passengers are increasingly keen to try out new leisure destinations by high-speed

Looking ahead, London is gearing up for one its busiestever summers as travellers flock to London to enjoy a range of attractions.

The combination of the Queen's Jubilee celebrations and the London 2012 Games and Festival will ensure the capital has much to offer sports and arts enthusiasts

As a sponsor of the London 2012 Games, Eurostar says that it will be playing a key role in bringing spectators to London and in helping to make the Games a truly international celebration.

Petrovic said: "We are gearing up for an exciting summer as the nation counts down to the London 2012 celebrations.

"Bookings for the June bank-holiday weekend are looking strong, with thousands of visitors coming to London to enjoy the pageantry of the Queen's Jubilee.

'There is no doubt that London is set to have one of its most memorable years on record and we are certainly looking forward to welcoming visitors from around the world to share in the experience.

International defence contractor welcomes MP for premises tour

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

MP Damian Green paid a visit to one of the county's leading defence-contractor companies, which exports its goods across the world.

Peli Hardigg, which is based in Ashford, make cases for hardware including bombs, guns, aircraft components and satellite dishes for the military.

Customers include the British Army, the US Marines, the French army and the Saudi Arabian air force.

The company, which has an annual turnover of more than £300 million, is Americanowned and moved much of its European manufacturing to Ashford 18 months ago.

"The workforce is more flexible and transport links are excellent," said managing director Mark Heydon.

Among the contracts for Peli Hardigg are containers for canopies and other components for Saudi Arabia as part of a deal that saw the Gulf state buy the Eurofighter Typhoon aircraft, weapons cases for the British Army's SA 80 assault rifle, protective carriers for the Paveway Four guided bomb and containers for satellite uplinks for the US Marines

Foam packaging to protect the equipment is also made at the Ashford plant.

"You can push one of our cases out of the back of an aircraft attached to a parachute and it'll arrive on the ground undamaged and ready for use," said sales manager Maurice Morsia.

"For troops on the ground, that is obviously vital. We can truthfully say that for our business mission failure is not an option.

Some 70 per cent of the company's overall product is exported, with France, Germany and Sweden the major markets.

As well as components for the military, the cases and containers are also bought by the emergency services.

A range of waterproof notepads - issued to soldiers in the field – is also one of Peli Hardigg's products, as are cases for 24-carat-gold-plated spanners, used by armourers because eliminate potentially dangerous static electricity.

Green said: "It is great to see companies such as Peli Hardigg in Ashford - not just competing successfully domestically but on a world stage.'

Workshops help small firms to get on the web

ADVICE on setting up a business presence on the web was given by experts from Google who visited the county setting up workshops.

Folkestone and Thanet were the venues for small companies to learn how best to establish a profile online.

Demand was such for places at Folkestone that a third day was added to the original two.

Luke Smith, of Google, organised the sessions.

"Around 50 per cent of businesses are not online at all, so we are helping to get those who want to establish a web presence."

Folkestone and Hythe MP Damian Collins brought the experts to his constituency.

'I met Google in London and thought a visit to Folkestone would really benefit local companies.

"The first two days were immediately booked up, so we added a third, which shows the level of enthusiasm in the town.

"In all, 70 appointments were made and there were other interested people who dropped in on the day."

Community should take credit for energy award, says winner

VATTENFALL has received industry recognition, with Thanet Offshore Wind Farm winning a top energy prize.

The 100-turbine scheme won the Offshore Renewables Award at the Offshore Achievement Awards - the first time a renewable energy award has been given by the organiser, the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE).

Company spokesman Ole Bigum Nielsen said: "Vattenfall is honoured to have received this prestigious award on behalf of everyone who helped build the wind farm.

'We think that the people of Thanet should take much of the credit for this award as Vattenfall could not have done it without the support and efforts of local people, communities and businesses.

"We also think it reflects well on the hard work and engineering excellence of the British workforce that helped build the wind farm in a little over two years.

The 300MW Thanet Offshore Wind Farm was until recently the largest operating offshore wind farm in the world. It started generating power in June 2010 and is controlled from its operations and maintenance base in Ramsgate.

More than 1,000 British workers helped build the wind farm over a two-year period and the wind farm now employs 20 locallybased technicians.

It has been designed to generate clean, green power for the next 20 to 25 years, producing the equivalent annual electricity demand of 200,000 UK households.

The Offshore Achievement Awards have a 25-year history of celebrating outstanding success in the UK oil and gas industry. The Offshore Renewables Award recognises technical excellence in an offshore marine renewables project. It also recognises outstanding design, significant innovation, unusual complexity or unusual scale.

New courses for gold standard electricians

A BRAND new gold standard electrical installation apprenticeship is due to start for trainees in September.

It is being run by Thanet College, in partnership with training provider JTL and Kent County Council.

This is the first time apprenticeships like this have been offered in Thanet, with apprentices getting the chance to train in the college's new electrical workshop, while gaining skills for the future and working in a real job.

Organisers say the new programme is highly effective for employers as, for the first time. they can take on electrical apprentices that are trained locally. The college is also launching an electrice pre-apprenticeship course. which aims to giveyoung people head start in the job market, and it's free for anyone aged 16-18 vears old. Mark Syrett, JTL's regional manager for the South East, said: "All the staff at Thanet College, and my team and I, are looking forward to working with new employers to get the September intake started into the industry. There's a lot going on in Kent at the moment, making this a really exciting time for us.'

Thanet College head of technology Stewart Haywood added: "We're really excited to be able to offer these new courses. and hope to be able to help a lot of young people make their first steps towards promising careers in electrical and building services engineering.

College principal Graham Razey said: "This important new initiative will mean that, for the first time, employers will be able to take on locally trained electrical apprentices with the right skills to contribute to the local economy.

"As a college we are committed to putting practical skills on a level playing field with academic prowess and our new gold standard electrical installation apprenticeship is an important step forward in this direction.

"Thanet College has made substantial investment in facilities and these students will be among the first to benefit."

Hadlow's green rural hub building scoops sustainable design award

HADLOW College's Rural Regeneration Centre has won its third award, after scooping the Sustainable Design Project of the Year 2012 in the Green IT Awards.

The building, which acts as a 'rural hub' for conferences and seminars, serves as a visitor centre.

The building is constructed to sustainable PassivHaus standards using renewable technology and has low carbon emissions. It uses just 10 per cent of the typical energy consumption of a modern building and is the first of its kind to be constructed in the UK using prefabricated materials.

The RRC is a sympathetic conversion and extension to redundant cow sheds, with over 95 per cent of the original shed structure being retained on site.

It is situated on the college's operational dairy farm.

Designer of the RRC, James Anwyl, director of Eurobuild said: "It's great to be recognised for the design work we did for Hadlow College.

"The only way to build a PassivHaus building for less than the standard cost was to rehearse the entire construction 'virtually' – on the computer using building information modelling (BIM).

"We achieved this and built at an affordable level by using Without ArchiCAD (BIM) this may not have been possible.

Tourism trip to the Gambia a life-changing experience for students

KIND-hearted Canterbury College students have returned from a trip to the Gambia that proved to be a life-changing experience – for themselves and the locals they went out to help.

The 24 BTEC extended diploma travel and tourism second year students handed over books and stationery to needy Gambian children during a week-long visit to the West African country.

This is the third year that students on this course have had the opportunity to visit the Gambia to learn about eco and sustainable

They met local tribes at a self-sufficient ecovillage, Tumani Tenda, and visited Ibnu Taimiah Primary School, an orphanage and a nursery. The school, orphanage and nursery received stationery donations from the students.

They also went to the International Business College in Banjul where they discussed travel and tourism with students there.

Canterbury College travel and tourism tutor Graham Dwyer said: "Our students were very moved by the state of the school, nursery and orphanage, which are unbelievably poor and rely on money that is generated by the country's tourist trade. Ibnu Taimiah School is just a wooden hut divided into two sections. There wasn't a dry eye in the house when the Gambian pupils sang If You're Happy and You Know It, to us in English. It was an eye opener for everyone on the trip.'

Travel and tourism's trip to the Gambia was a requirement for all students on the second year of the extended diploma. To find out more about travel and tourism courses go to www.canterburycollege.ac.uk/travelandtourism.

County construction firm signs up for college redevelopment scheme

KENT construction firm Denne has won a £13 million contract as part of the £25m redevelopment of MidKent College's Maidstone campus.

The landmark project – due for completion in December, 2013 – will bring the site up to the standard of the new Medway Campus in Gillingham.

The wider scheme will also include the refurbishment of the University for the Creative Arts' Maidstone campus, which was purchased by the college last year and is also part of the Oakwood Park complex.

Director of finance Ian Rule said: "Denne has a fantastic record of delivering quality results and we were impressed by their drive and passion for this exciting project.

"They really understand the college's vision and values, and will be a valuable partner for us.

"Using the financial strength that comes from being one of the largest colleges in the South East, we can provide the scale of funds necessary to provide our students with the state-ofthe-art facilities they deserve.

"We're delighted to have reached this important milestone in the redevelopment process and look forward to witnessing the many impressive changes to come.

Operating throughout London and the South East since 1803, Denne - which has its head office in Borden, near Sittingbourne - is part of the Leadbitter Group.

UNIVERSITY STUDY TAILORED TO SUIT YOUR EVERY NEED

VERY year, the University of Kent attracts thousands of part-time students, usually local people who work or live in the region. They are students of all ages and backgrounds, each with their own reasons for wanting to study on a part-time programme.

There are lots of ways you can study at Kent, and what you choose will depend on why you want to study: if you are interested in studying purely for pleasure and interest, then an Open Lecture or a short course might be right for you; if you want to study for personal development, there are certificates, diplomas and degrees available in a wide range of subjects available at Canterbury, Medway and Tonbridge.

There are also more than 100 part-time post-graduate programmes ranging from anthropology to war, media and modernity.

If you are interested in career development, the Kent Business School offers business and management programmes, including the prestigious Kent MBA.

Most part-time students are not schoolleavers, so Kent tries to take into account your work and life experiences and your personal interests, as well as any academic qualifications you may already have.

A certificate programme is the first stage of an undergraduate degree programme at Kent.

Some certificate programmes accept applications from adults who have no formal qualifications, provided they can demonstrate an interest in and an aptitude for their chosen subject.

Computer skills are important for all students. If you are returning to study after some time you may not feel confident in using computers to assist with your work and to fulfil the requirements of the university.

If you're concerned that you don't have the skills required, Kent is able to help with a variety of training courses to suit your needs and prepare you for studying at university level.

CANTERBURY CAMPUS

The Canterbury campus was founded in 1965. It is built on 300 acres of parkland overlooking Canterbury and is still growing and evolving.

Modern buildings are surrounded by open green spaces, courtyards, gardens, ponds and woodland.

It has excellent facilities including a theatre and cinema, Templeman library, purpose-built science laboratories and teaching buildings.

The campus is a 20-minute walk from the city centre and is easily reached by car or by public transport.

MEDWAY CAMPUS

Medway offers a multi-million-pound campus, with state-of-the-art buildings and facilities including the Drill Hall library.

You can expect high-quality teaching and an exceptional level of personal support.

The university has invested millions of pounds in new, purpose-built facilities.

These include lecture theatres, teaching and seminar rooms equipped with the latest technology. There is a wide range of cafes and bars for anything from a coffee to a full meal.

The Medway campus can be easily reached by car. Free parking is available close to the main campus, at the Historic Dockyard.

TONBRIDGE CENTRE

Most of our part-time courses in west Kent are taught at the Tonbridge Centre, which is a small, friendly centre dedicated to part-time study

Facilities including the university library at the Tonbridge Centre are open to all Kent students and our seminar rooms are equipped to the same high standard as on our Canterbury and Medway campuses.

You also have full access to all the resources available at our other campuses.

The Tonbridge Centre is ideally situated in the heart of Tonbridge, just off the high street, a five-minute walk from the railway station and close to numerous car parks.

PART-TIME STUDENTS

Kent's part-time students may be eligible for funding from either Student Finance England or the university.

From September 2012, part-time students may now be eligible for a tuition-fee loan. The financial support is designed to help you with your tuition fees or with other studying costs, such as books and travel.

Please refer to www.direct.gov.uk/studentfinance for full details.

OPEN DAYS AT KENT

We hold open days at Canterbury, Medway and Tonbridge several times a year.

These give you the opportunity to talk to both members of our guidance team and academic staff. For further information, please see www.kent.ac.uk/opendays.

ADULT Learners' Week helps to inspire people make a difference in their lives and each year highlights people who have made real changes for the better.

Among them is Tegan Hunter, who had been homeless for three years, 'sofa surfing' at friends' houses and for several months sleeping on a park bench. For 18 months she has lived at a homelessness hostel.

Having done badly at school, she had no selfconfidence and no idea how to get her life back on track and get a job. But through a partnership between the hostel and Canterbury College, she was able to take a series of courses and qualifications.

Through participating in a project part-funded by the European Social Fund, Tegan completed courses and qualifications in Literacy and Numeracy (both OCR levels 1 and 2), Basic IT, CV Writing, Word Processing (EDCL level 2), Spreadsheets and Employability Skills. She is now considering taking an apprenticeship in Business Administration.

More confident and focused, she is actively seeking work and encourages other residents to attend courses.

'These courses have changed my life," she said. "I didn't have the right attitude towards myself and life before I took them.

Tegan Hunter

The Adult Learners scheme enables people who might ordinarily never have the chance to increase their knowledge and abilities and so give themselves a better chance of finding fulfilling employment. Courses are available in a wide range of activities and allow participants to pursue traditional subjects.

who are featured have all benefitted and their lives have undergone very positive changes...

Ben March

ON release from prison in 2008, Ben March from Tonbridge was given the opportunity to refresh his Level Two Literacy and Numeracy qualifications, and on completion of these he was asked to become a Skills for Life tutor with the New Skills New Lives project in the Kent probation area.

This year he has been recognised for his achievements in the awards. Ben had no experience of teaching but could empathise with offenders and help them gain their literacy and numeracy qualifications, and so was given in-depth training to help him become a competent tutor.

Ben completed a Level Three Preparing to Teach in the Lifelong Learning Sector qualification and an Information and Guidance qualification to provide him with formal skills for the job. While working as a tutor, he is studying for a Diploma to Teach in the Lifelong Learning Sector and is now a fully-qualified teacher in adult education.

The work that Ben has done with young offenders has had an impact on re-offending rates and is vastly improving their job prospects, with Ben's own journey acting as an inspiration to many. 'The learning that I have completed during my time with the project has been a breath of fresh air, allowing me to forge a successful new career," he said.

MARK Jones, who was made redundant in 2002 and suffered both from unemployment and some serious health issues, is an award-winner for 2012

While he was ill, he built on his interest in IT and taught himself a range of skills using online resources. He then took on some voluntary work at a local centre helping vulnerable adults learn about computing. As a result, he got qualified in IT and enrolled on a teacher-training course.

Mark now teaches at Kent Adult Education and continues to learn himself. He hopes one day to find full-time work in the IT sector

He said: "I never thought I would leave that dark place, but I've been proven wrong.

"İ use myself as an example for others – it makes them realise things can change and there can be a positive future.'

SHEPWAY DISTRICT COUNCIL

MEMBERS' ALLOWANCES SCHEME

The Local Authorities' (Members' Allowances) (England Regulations 2003 place certain duties on local auth in connection with publicising the recommendations by their Independent Remuneration Panel. (IRP).

- The report of the IRP proposes a model for allowance that is transparent, sustainable, easy to understand allowances to the basic councillors allowance (paid to all councillors) by a 'points' system.
- The recommended 'point' scores for different roles are based on the panel's consideration of the appropriate and justifiable relativities between those roles as they operate at Shepway District Council. The consolidated basic allowance referred to below has a point score of 100. The relative 'scores' may not be the same as in other Councils, but the panel is a Shepway panel looking at what is relevant and appropriate within Shepway.
- Based on this approach, the report proposes poin scores for each of the special responsibility allowances, which will, if adopted, establish the relativities both between the different special responsibility allowances and between those allowances and the basic allowance.

The recommendations of the panel relate to the Members Allowances Scheme for 2012/13. They are as follows:

- (1) That the option for councillors to join the Local Government Pension Scheme not be introduced
- (2) That Shepway District Council introduce a dependents carers' allowance at the level of the national minimum
- (3) That no changes be made to the current scheme fo reimbursing travel and subsistence expenses
- (4) That the scheme for travelling and subsistence relate to official duties be adopted by the council
- (5) That the voluntary discount be maintained at 50%
- (6) That the current ICT allowance be consolidated into the basic allowance
- (7) That the revised consolidated basic allowance be se at £4,500
- (8) That the councillors basic allowances be adjusted annually at the start of the civic year by the Consume Price Index figure for the proceeding February (published in March)
- (9) That the application of indexation to the councillors basi allowance be subject to an annual vote of full Council
- (10) That special responsibility allowances be determined by reference to the basic allowance and amended in line with amendments to that basic allowance
- (11) That the committees are classified into tiers and tha special responsibility allowances be paid to the chairs of tier one and tier two committees only
- (12) That the special responsibility allowance for the chair of a tier one committee be set at 100 points which equates to an allowance of £4,500
- (13) That the That special responsibility allowance for the chair of a tier two committee be set at 30 points and frozen at its current level until the effects of indexation brings the proposed allowance to the level of the current allowance which equates to an allowance of £1,350
- (14) The payment of special responsibility allowances to
- (15)The special responsibility allowance for the role of cabinet members is set at the level of 200 points which equates to an allowance of £9,000
- (16) The special responsibility allowance for the role of Deputy Leader of the Council is set at the level of 220 points which equates to an allowance of £9,900
- (17) The special responsibility allowance for Leader of the Council is set at 440 points which equates to ar allowance of £19,800
- (18) That the special responsibility allowance for Leader o the Council is frozen at its current level until such time as the proposed level matches the current level unde indexation arrangements
- (19) That up to a maximum of nine special responsibility allowances are paid to Lead Members set at a level of 30 points which equates to an allowance of £1,350
- (20) That the current group allowances be abolished
- (21) That a single special responsibility allowance for the role of 'Leader of the Opposition' (being defined as the leader of the largest minority group not forming part of the administration) be introduced at the level of 150 points which equates to an allowance of £6,750
- (22)The special responsibility allowance for the role o Chair of the Council is set at 150 points which equates to an allowance of £6,750
- (23)The special responsibility allowance for the role of Vice-Chair of the Council is set at 30 points which equates to an allowance of £1,350
- (24) The SRA for Co-opted Members covered by the scheme of remuneration for Councillors be set at 15 points which equates to an allowance of £675

The Council is due to meet at its Annual Meeting scheduled panel and to decide whether to adopt the new scheme

THE INTERVIEW

Paul L Martin

Trinity Million, the global sensation who never forgets his county roots

Joe Bill meets the village lad whose one-off charity show inspired an international career

HE late-night entertainment bars and clubs of London's West End can seem a million miles away from the villages of Kent.

But for Paul L Martin, who hails from Littlebourne, near Canterbury, having his name in lights in the capital became almost a right of passage.

The 36-year-old has been described by The Stage magazine as the king of cabaret and his career has seen him perform across the world.

But Martin's transition to his recent role as a panel judge on a cable-TV reality show was far from the typical pushy parents and childstar syndrome so many performers go through.

He said: "I have the people of Kent, and especially Littlebourne, to thank for pushing me into cabaret. My mother went on the committee of the local leukaemia research fund because the son of a friend of hers had leukaemia and they were trying to think of ways to raise money for him.

"I was only 15 at the time and my mum said 'Why don't you and your little friends put on a show?'. So basically we did a 90-minute show in a barn and it went from there.

"We performed songs from musicals, sketches and comedy from Victoria Wood – and we ended up doing it four years in a row. I didn't know at the time that it was cabaret that I was doing but that is definitely where it started."

Martin is currently the judge on the Sky Living show Bigger Than..., which offers lookalikes the chance to be pampered like their famous counterparts, but with a rather large twist.

He explained: "You add in the name of a pop star, say Bigger than... Britney. It is a search for lookalikes who are bigger than the pop star.

"We find some large girls who might look like Britney if they slimmed down a bit and we give them weight-loss programmes that Britney has tried in the past. We knock it down to the last three and then the winner gets representation with my agency company."

But back at the start of his career, the cabaret star wasn't aware of the path his career would take: "I think I was quite stupid when I was younger. I didn't know that I wanted to go into performance – people had to tell me. It was a bit ridiculous that I hadn't realised it because I was always singing and dancing and all that.

"I worked at Canterbury Cathedral during a year out and all the ladies there would say 'Of course, you'll be off to drama school soon' and I hadn't even thought about it."

At 20, Martin went to Mountview Drama School in London, but it didn't exactly end how the performer had planned.

He said: "I did a three-year musical theatre course, but right before the end I had problems with funding and I actually didn't graduate. I left about three months before the ceremony and then, like everyone, became an out-of-work actor and a waiter.

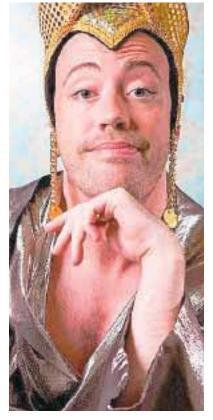

"I ended up writing a play that I put on in London Fringe. It was a one-man show. It was a mixture of my words, other people's songs and some poetry that I had written and had published in some London magazines. I used that as my own graduation."

Now the founder and director of his own entertainment agency, Excess All Areas, Martin spends a lot of time behind the scenes creating the stage magic and was recently named 'best producer' at the London Fringe Report Awards 2012.

But the performer's big break couldn't have been any less 'behind the scenes' as he quickly became known by his alter-ego, Trinity Million.

He said: "I was working in a bar in Old Compton Street at the time and two drag queens came in and I had a good chat with them and told them I was an actor. Their reply was to tell me that they were in need of some new drag showgirls for their act.

"Two weeks later, I was wearing a corset and became a showgirl. It was great – I learned everything there and ended up being a drag queen for about seven years, playing at different venues in the West End.

"The thing about drag is that it gives you a tremendous amount of power regarding some of the things you can get away with saying. If you were standing there saying this while dressed as a bloke you would probably get punched, so it gives you a lot of confidence."

It was during his days as Trinity Million that Paul L Martin appeared on TV shows with the likes of Michael Barrymore as well as getting parts in musicals including Angels, Punks And Raging Queens and Ruthless as well as creating the role of Philip Salon for the Boy George musical Taboo.

"It was when I started travelling that I hung up my dress. I did shows in New York at the famous Don't Tell Mama bar. I went on to perform in Berlin, Rome and Paris doing pure cabaret."

But even when travelling the globe, Martin is close to his roots in the Garden of England.

He said: "My family are all still in \widetilde{K} ent. My mum and my sister run an antiques shop in St Nicholas at Wade in Thanet, and others live in Greenhill. So I am still tied to the county and I have many fond memories of growing up here.

"I am always heading back to see the family, plus myself and my husband have been thinking about buying a house in Margate and we are very excited about the regeneration of that area."

Having recently organised the London Cabaret Awards, Martin has been heralded for his work in helping the resurgence of stage art in the capital. However, arguably one of his most high-profile roles is looming just a few weeks away.

He said: "I will be hosting the Diamond Jubilee celebrations in Battersea Park. There is obviously a very special flotilla heading down the Thames with the Queen onboard and the celebrations happen after that. It will be really exciting and completely free."

Arabian night was different but lacked that vital spark

BEING different can be a double-edged sword in today's competitive eating-out marketplace.

After all, get it wrong and the chances are the discerning diner never darkens your handtowels again and takes his business elsewhere.

But get it right and it can deliver an everincreasing stream of customers through your doors, armed with recession-busting cash.

Yet being different in Canterbury is no easy task. As perhaps the county's most cosmopolitan of hubs, there is barely a variety of food that is not served up in one of its many restaurants.

Azouma, however, looks to catch the eye by offering an authentic experience that extends to more than just food. What it tries to achieve is the deliverance of a little slice of Moroccan sun or Arabian warmth on a gloomy Friday night.

And it gets so close to achieving it that you cannot help but be rather won over.

Because, even aside from the starters and the mains, those who want to buy into the Arabic lifestyle can eat, drink and then go and sit outside and puff on a shisha pipe while sipping a cocktail or pot of mint tea.

Close your eyes and use your imagination and the streets of the city can almost become the crowded lanes of the souks of Marrakesh as you sit there puffing away.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

You have to give Azouma 10 out of 10 for effort. Situated just outside the city walls - and away from the main hordes of tourists - stepping inside does feel a little like walking into another world. The décor is very Moroccan: thick tables, comfy chairs, lots of cushions and drapes.

So on to the food. The good news is that the variety is wide, with plenty for vegetarians, and all rooted in the culture it aims to emulate. There are tagine dishes, couscous, mezze, grilled fish and charcoal dishes all lovingly prepared.

Sharing a vegetarian mixed mezze (£10.95)set a good benchmark. Crisp, crunchy Lebanese fried bread, tasty falafels and light spring rolls were plentiful and served in authentic dishes where hands were the cutlery. The menu gave a handy bit of background and history of the

For the main course, pan-roasted prawns (£13.95) cooked on a bed of potato and topped with cream, coconuts and cheeses packed a powerful punch, while the lamb shish kebab (£10.95) featured tender, tasty marinated meat.

We missed dessert, opting instead for cocktails and mint tea on the terrace with a shisha pipe. Not a healthy option, granted, but it was rather fun. It also provided a very different ending to an evening dining out something to be applauded.

There was, however, a big 'but' to all of this. Amid the effort and the interesting food, the atmosphere, at least on this visit, was almost non-existent. It craved some life, a little louder music... anything just to inject a bit of zing.

But when the total bill only just toppled the £50 mark and included two soft drinks, a cocktail, mint tea, shisha and two courses for two, you could hardly argue with the value.

AA rosette award is just desserts for patron Dev

THE Ambrette restaurant in Margate has won an AA rosette under head chef and patron Dev Biswal, pictured.

The award was given to the Indian-cuisine eatery after a team of AA inspectors recognised its ability to "serve food prepared with care, understanding and skill, using good-quality ingredients" and achieve "standards that stand out in their local area".

Biswal said: "We've been featured in most of the UK's leading restaurant guides for some time now, but an AA rosette is one accolade that has eluded us.'

The chef grew up in Calcutta and trained at the Dubai Sheraton before moving to London in 2003 for spells at Mangoes and Eriki. He became a partner in The Indian Princess in Margate in December 2006, becoming patron and rebranding it as The Ambrette in 2010.

Biswal's second Ambrette restaurant opened in Rye in December 2011 and is located in the historic White Vine House.

The updated AA Restaurant Guide 2013, to be published in September, will feature more than 1,900 restaurants, rated and awarded rosettes by AA inspectors.

With detailed write-ups on each restaurant, the guide is valued highly by Britain's food-lovers.

No distance for rich taste of the exotic the British are quite fond of a spicy curry. So much so, in fact, that it has been adopted as one of our national dishes. The foods, flavours and cooking techniques in the UK are just some of the benefits of our multicultural society. With new nationalities come new dishes and, inevitably, new restaurants.

A quick glance at the Kent countryside and coastal resorts may have you thinking that the only meal available here is the very British roast dinner or traditional fish and chips... you would be very wrong.

Long gone are the days when an exotic meal out con-sisted of two choices... Chinese or Indian. Kent is now blessed with a diverse range of foreign foods, including Mexican, Nepalese, Thai, Italian, French, Greek or even many nationalites had the traditional foods of their heritage available to us all, whenever we want them.

And that means that never before have there been so many options from which diners can choose. The best thing for chefs in all of Kent's restaurants, no matter what nationality, is the range of local produce that can be harvested and used for so many wonderful dishes.

From the classically British fisherman's pie to the exotic and spicy king prawn Madras, from the gravy-covered roast beef to the chilli chicken fajita, Kent has both the ingredients and the know-how for all.

But just in case you are worried by the range of choices available, or you just can't choose which continent. to try out, here are six absolute crackers!

Gurkha Palace

Folkestone

Why here...

Try an authentic taste of Nepal with regional cuisines. The food of this beautiful country is as diverse as the landscape, so it's no surprise to learn that Gurkha Palace's menu is vast.

On the menu...

Excellent food has seen it nominated as the best Nepalese restaurant in the country by the Good Food Guide. Highly commended by Channel Chamber in best customer-service awards.

KENT ATTRACTIONS

It's Saturday knight Hever Sport of kings

Hever Castle, Edenbridge

Through July and August 01732 865224

www.hevercastle.co.uk

HENRY VIII is inviting everyone to celebrate at Hever Castle as Sir Samuel of Hever is knighted.

The ceremony in mid-July marks the start of the annual jousting tournament at which spectators will be treated to exciting displays of action, falls and fights as the knights of royal England bring the medieval sport to life. The tournaments continue over summer-holiday weekends, some including Fridays. July 21-22 and 27-29 and August 10-12, 17-19 and 24-25 all feature events. Fach tournament starts when the king and gueen arrive at the castle at 2pm and invite them to the jousting arena. The jousts begin at about 2.15pm and last an hour. Support your chosen knight as the thrill of the joust takes place in an arena complete with royal box. Visitors can tour the gardens, once the childhood haunt of Anne Boleyn. The gardens open at 10.30am and the castle itself opens at midday.

Cultivating culture Gardens and history

Beech Court Gardens, Ashford

Saturday, May 19 01233 740735; www.beechcourtgardens.co.uk

VISITORS to Beech Court in Challock can enjoy guided spring walks around the gardens, including strolls through the attractive viburnum walk.

The walk is free with garden admission and visitors can hear about the garden's history and wildlife while admiring mature rhododendrons and azaleas, which will also be at their peak. The gardens surround a 14th-century farmhouse and the site dates back to Saxon times, suggested by the discovery of Roman swords and artefacts. Guided tours start at 2.30pm.

What can be done?

'Save the species' is in focus at animal park

Howletts, Bekesbourne

Open daily from 9.30am-6pm 0844 8424647

www.aspinallfoundation.org

CRITICALLY-ENDANGERED species will be the focus of this month's visitor themes at Howletts Wild Animal Park.

Animal fans can embark on a journey of discovery to learn what can be done to help the survival of awesome species like the Sumatran tiger

Throughout the month, visitors will be able to follow self-guided trails, take part in quizzes and enjoy educational talks while discovering how to help protect endangered species.

Animal director Neil Spooner said: "May's theme is very close to our hearts, while the quizzes and trails are a fun way to highlight the importance of conservation and the work that we do here in conjunction with The Aspinall Foundation."

The animal park is home to endangered animals like western lowland gorillas and black rhinos.

Saturday and Sunday, May 19-20 Tickets from £11 to £26 www.atgtickets.com/bromley

THE English National Ballet production of My First Sleeping Beauty will pirouette on to the stage at The Churchill Theatre this month. Following the success of the Angelina Ballerina ballets. which reached audiences across the UK and Europe, English National Ballet in partnership with English National Ballet School is continuing the initiative to bring ballet to young audiences. The show is performed by the third-year students from English National Ballet School in their first professional tour, so it will be a first for both audiences and performers. My First Sleeping Beauty is choreographed and designed by award-winning choreographer Matthew Hart.

It's a labour of love for fans Hue And Crv

Woodville Halls, Gravesend Sunday, May 13, at 8pm 01474 337774

www.gravesham.gov.uk

SCOTTISH hip-funkateers Hue and Cry return to the stage with a new tour and a new album to boot.

This year heralds the release of Hot Wire, the first new album from brothers Pat and Greg Kane since 2008's Open Snul

As Scottish as they come, Hue And Cry leapt to prominence in 1987 when their single Labour Of Love hit the No 6 slot. The immensely-successful album Remote and further hit singles Violently and Looking For Linda followed as Hue And Cry cemented their position as intellectual soul-pop pioneers. The new record, Hot Wire, combines a love of Steely Dan as well as including songs reminiscent of Stevie Wonder, Sly And The Family Stone and early New Orleans-inspired funk. Expect the lads to play a few old classics, too.

Alan Davies

The Orchard, Dartford

Tuesday, October 2, 8pm 01322 220000 www.orchardtheatre.co.uk

COMEDIAN and actor Alan Davies has announced a date in Kent as part of his stand-up tour.

The funnyman, known for his appearances on highbrow panel show QI, has come back to the stage more than 10 years after his last comedy circuit.

Davies, who also played iconic BBC detective Jonathan Creek, has been in hot water recently and found himself in the papers after comments regarding the Hillsborough football tragedy.

The mop-top comedian, who has also appeared in BBC drama series Hotel Babylon, will bring the show Life Is Pain to The Orchard Theatre Later in the year. Tickets, priced at £25, are on sale now.

The gods of folk-rock Fairport Convention

Canterbury Cathedral Lodge

Sunday, May 6 01227 831493

www.folkinthebarn.co.uk

FOLK-ROCK legends Fairport Convention will be celebrating their 45th anniversary in Canterbury next month.

Formed in 1967's 'summer of love', Fairport Convention have been hailed as the originators of British folk-rock music and contributors to the fantastic Canterbury scene.

The 2012 anniversary tour will feature songs from the band's recent studio album, the critically-acclaimed Festival Bell. But with such a long history, the band have a vast repertoire from which to draw, so this year the gigs will include a selection of favourite songs and tunes chosen through a poll of the band's fans. Tickets are priced at £18.

A mad old life Suggs shares his memoirs

Leas Cliff Hall, Folkestone

Tuesday, October 9 0844 871 3015 www.leascliffhall.co.uk

MADNESS star Suggs heads back to Kent to tell the story of his life later this year. The much-talked-about tour hits Folkestone's Leas Cliff Hall in October and tickets are expected to sell fast. Suggs said: "I've just turned 50, the kids have left home and my cat just died."

It was this sad event that triggered the frontman to go on a quest to discover what happened to the father he never knew.

Stunned by what he learnt, Suggs was taken back to his childhood on the streets of 1970s Soho and his first appearance on Top Of The Pops at the age of 18. Is it a play? Is it stand-up comedy? Is it music hall? Whatever it is, hold on to your seats!

FUN BY THE SEA

A thrilling outing for all in traditional Margate

EUROPE'S largest mobile theme park is coming to Thanet this summer with an exciting range of thrills and rides.

Giant inflatables, fairground fun, water boats, stalls and games are all included in the attraction, which will be on offer at the Dreamland site, close to the beach in picturesque Margate.

In all, there are more than 25 funtastic rides for families and friends to see, while many of the other attractions have special offers for thrill-seekers.

The funpark is sure to make summer in Margate go with a swing as the resort goes back to the glory days of Dreamland.

The seaside site was one of the most popular places to spend a summer evening throughout the 70s and 80s, with its combination of a great beach and traditional cafes, bars and restaurants.

As a holiday destination, Margate became popular with Londoners, portrayed so memorably in the Jolly Boys' Outing episode of Only Fools And Horses as well as by cockney singers Chaz and Dave in their classic hit Down To Margate.

The classic scenic-railway roller-coaster, the big wheel and Dreamland became synonomous with the traditional seaside holiday down in Thanet.

But the rides visiting Margate this summer will be bang up to date, giving customers all the excitement of state-of-the-art thrilling experiences.

Monday to Thursday each week sees customers able to get a premium wristband, giving unlimited rides and visits to all the rides and funhouses for half-price if another is bought at full price

There are offers, too, for family tickets as well as single parents.

Opening times are 1pm-9pm at weekends and bank holidays and 5pm-9pm on weekdays. The attractions are open until Sunday, May 13.

FOOD AND DRINK

Style with substance at city's stunning Abode Hotel

THE Michael Caines Restaurant is the stunning centrepiece of ABode Canterbury food and beverage operations.

The beautifully-designed dining room, which offers 72 covers, combines classic elegance with modern style. There is the glass-fronted Wine Room, private Chef's Table in the kitchen area and the classy Champagne and Cocktail Bar – it really does offer a stunning addition to the Canterbury dining scene.

The Michael Caines Champagne and Cocktail Bar has quickly become one of Canterbury's most fashionable and popular places. The setting is picturesque, the city-centre location convenient day or night, and the Champagnes and cocktails arquably the best in town.

Sometimes all you want is a simple, freshly-prepared sandwich and a glass of wine, Champagne or just a freshly-brewed pot of tea... it will cater for all needs.

The Michael Caines Champagne and Cocktail Bar offers a discreet venue to meet friends or colleagues, have just a drink, or also a quick and informal bite far from the bustle of Canterbury's busy city centre and shopping precincts.

The Old Brewery Tavern looks back in history, but it is wholly contemporary in design, outlook, approach and style. The striking sliding-glass windows that allow the team to open to the sunshine whenever it may appear and the decked beer garden and bar offer a great place for a drink in the summer.

There is also a comfortable, more discreet lounge area with a warm modern fireplace, while wooden tables and chairs in the central area retain the feel of traditional British pub.

During the evenings, the atmosphere can once again change completely, with more mood lighting unveling live music and DJ nights for a real party.

HEALTH AND ADVICE

It's easy to take care of your smile... here's how

THE social effects of wearing dentures can be devastating whatever your age; nobody likes to think that they don't have their own teeth.

People associate dentures with the more mature person, but you would be surprised at the age-span in reality. You can lose a tooth at any age through an accident or through infection.

At Canterbury Dentures the team always put patients' needs first and is very sensitive to each client, always advising the best treatment tailored for them.

This sometimes could mean a referral for implants, and if the team thinks that this is the best option for the client, then that is what will be advised.

Canterbury Dentures knows how important cosmetically your teeth are and if you lose your tooth or your denture, or it's in need of repair, it will endeavour to turn denture replacements around in a short period of time, with repairs in one hour.

Patients can contact directly or request a referral from their dentist.

At Canterbury Dentures you will be seen by Peter, who is the clinical technician. He will make your denture and guide you through every stage and give you that allimportant one-to-one personal attention. The process for receiving a denture is as follows:

Firstly, initial consultation to see the client's requirements and needs and to discuss a treatment plan.

Secondly, impressions of the teeth and mouth will need to be taken.

Thirdly, there will be fittings and any needed adjustments dealt with before the personal after-care is finally offered.

Canterbury Dentures is open Monday to Friday from 9am-4pm and on Saturday mornings by appointment only. Home visits are made within a 10-mile radius of Canterbury. Phone 01227 781188.

ADVENTUDE

Hit the road for excitement with a little help from TC

HERNE Bay's TC Motorhome & Caravan Centre offers expert advice and great deals on new and used motorhomes and touring caravans designed for the more adventurous among us.

At its purpose-built facility in Hillborough, Herne Bay, the TC team has more than 100 motorhomes available for purchase at any one time, making it one of the largest dealerships in the UK and well worth a visit.

All of the vehicles on sale are prepared to the highest standards, with the team's very own NCC-approved Habitation and Mechanical workshop facilities providing the peace of mind that both the customer and TC itself demand of their vehicles.

So whether it would be the first time you are venturing into motorhome, campervan or caravan ownership, or you are a seasoned user, TC believes that it can cater for all tastes and preferences.

TC Motorhomes is the appointed representative for selling new motorhomes, caravans and campervans for a number of top names in the business. Just some of the brands available include Bailey, Cl Caravans International, Rollerteam, Trigano-Tribute, Swift, Escape and Tribute Coachbuilt Motorhomes.

The team at TC believes in its mission statement: "From the quality preparation and presentation that each vehicle receives, to the attentive professional staff members that make TC Motorhomes 'tick'... there is a level of attention provided throughout that ensures our customers will want to shop again at TC Motorhomes."

TC Motorhomes can be found in Sweechbridge Road, Hillborough, Herne Bay CT6 6TE (phone 01227 289111).

Opening times are Monday to Friday 8.30am-6pm, Saturday 8.30am-5pm and Sunday by appointment only (bank holidays 10am-4pm).

IT'S BANK HOLIDAY!

Enjoy all that springtime in Kent has to offer

T'S A bank-holiday weekend, so now is the perfect time to use that extra day off and explore just what the Garden of England has to offer.

Whether it's the joys of the open fields and the downs, sandy beaches and cliffs, historic towns and cities or castles, or gardens and stately homes, a ride out will take you to some of the finest attractions that southern England has to offer.

Bluebells flower in May and the beautiful blue-carpeted woods are a true feature of Kent and one of spring's most magical sights.

The National Trust publishes details on its website of where to find the best bluebell walks in its properties - but there are also many sites in natural woodland that provide a feast for the senses.

Walking is the perfect springtime weekend pursuit, when it's not too cold to sit outside in a beer garden and enjoy a meal and drink while taking in the scenery.

How about taking in one of the county's highly-commended vineyards and enjoying a taste of Kent's award-winning wines?

Most vintages come from around the Weald, but there also others near Folkestone and Canterbury, with many offering tastings and tours.

It's the season when the county's stately homes and attractions are open, and with crowds fewer in number than for the rest of the holiday period it's the perfect time to take it all in at your leisure.

How about a journey by steam train to take in the views? Lines in the Weald and across Romney Marsh take in wonderful views.

Whatever you do this bank holiday be sure to enjoy the springtime.

County an attractive first-time proposition

HEMPSTEAD Valley, Dartford and Bexleyheath have been identified among the UK's property hot-spots for those looking to get their foot on the housing ladder.

According to online service Experian PropertyCheck, first-time buyers have been flocking to these areas.

The top 10 first-time buyer hot-spots in the UK are:

- 1) Milton Keynes
- 2) Dartford
- 3) Swindon

- 5) Hempstead Valley
- 6) Basingstoke
- 7) Crawley 8) Slough
- 9) Bexleyheath 10) Aylesbury

Peter Turner, managing director of Experian Interactive, said: "In spite of difficulties across the country in getting that first foot on the property ladder, online indicators suggest the market is improving for first-time buyers.

'first-time buyer mortgage' were up eightfold and searches for '95 per cent mortgages for first-time buvers' more than doubled in the last 12 months.

"For many first-time buyers, raising the necessary deposit to secure a mortgage involves many years of hard work and

"One of the benefits of the Experian PropertyCheck service is that it's about more than just house prices.'

Homeowners bullish about future cost of their property

POSITIVE signals have emerged for the housing market in the first quarter of 2012, with a rise in the number of British homeowners who expect house prices to climb over the next six months.

According to the latest Zoopla.co.uk Housing Market Sentiment Survey, two out of three British homeowners (66 per cent) are confident of house prices rising by the autumn.

This is the highest proportion of homeowners predicting property-price growth since the first half of 2010, and in stark contrast to sentiment at the end of 2011, when only 55 per cent of owners were predicting prices to climb.

In addition to the rise in overall confidence, homeowners are also more bullish now about how much they expect average house prices to rise over the next six months.

At the end of 2011, owners expected prices in their area to increase 2.2 per cent on average.

Over the last quarter, this has risen to 3.9 per cent - again, the highest price growth expectation in almost two years.

Confidence among homeowners in London is at a near all-time high, with 82 per cent of property-owners in the capital now confident of property price rises over the next six months.

And owners in the capital are predicting that house prices in London will grow 5.5 per cent by October.

There has also been an improvement in sentiment towards mortgage financing, with an increase in the number of property-owners reporting that it is now easier to secure a mortgage than it was at the end of 2011.

A total of 17 per cent of respondents believe mortgage availability has improved, up from 11 per cent last quarter.

Nicholas Leeming, of Zoopla.co.uk, said: "The property market has been in need of some positive news of late as many indicators have pointed toward stagnant prices.

"These results show that homeowners now feel a lot more positive than at the end of last year, and this confidence could bolster transaction and activity levels as we move further into the year."

HENRY VIII scared the clergy witless but argued that one should never frighten the horses

Peugeot took up this same cry after shrewdly incorporating soccer-star Michael Owen's five-star Manor House racing stables in Cheshire into a launch of its 508RXH hybrid.

Normal cars are forbidden to drive through the stable blocks there, but, thanks to the hybrid's silent electric zero-emission or ZEV mode, not one equine head was shaken as my Peugeot ghosted through.

The gee-gees also enjoyed a bit of racing competition, too, when we were invited to utilise the car's all-wheel-drive alongside the training gallops. Despite heavy going after driving rain, the 508RXH coped magnificently.

Indeed, the only ones likely to be scared by this clever new multi-role estate car from the French marque are other beefy load-luggers offering all-wheel-drive, such as the Audi A4 Allroad, Volvo XC70 and Subaru Outback.

For it presents a strong financial case thanks to the pioneering diesel-electric powertrain, which made its debut just a few weeks earlier on the Peugeot 3008 Hybrid4.

Like that car, the 508RXH can function as electric car, fuel-sipping/lower-emission diesel, or AWD workhorse – the diesel powers the front wheels while the electric motor deals with the rear.

It looks the part with its higher ground clearance, wider track, extra protection and smart alloys. It can walk the talk, too, with a total of 200bhp on tap from the 163bhp diesel and 37bhp electric motor, delivering 0-62mph in 9.5 seconds, yet this big plush estate returns an official 68.9mpg on the combined cycle.

Priced from a keen £33,695, the tax benefits are an even better form guide; apart from being in the lowest payable road-tax bracket – zero in year one and £30 thereafter – it also attracts 12 per cent Benefit-in-Kind tax against 26 per cent for the equivalent Audi A4 Allroad.

Figures like those engender pragmatism to outweigh the snob appeal of cars like the Audi and Volvo.

Not that the Peugeot concedes much on creature comforts; the interior matches the high standards set recently by Peugeot with lots of spec, including comfy half-leather seats and a trademark full-length glass roof.

Aside from our effort to avoid scaring the horses, ZEV will also have its uses for buyers doing limited local runs – they could cover 2.5 miles at up to 40mph – without help from the

In the real world, though, the diesel and electric motors mix and match to get the driving done as efficiently as possible, with braking energy being recovered to top up the batteries.

The 50RXH feels sure-footed on the road and, apart from some hesitation in the powertrain sometimes, delivers an impressive driving experience as well as a high-quality ride.

'Mother Volkswagen' lets us court her new soft-top star

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LIKE an interfering mother who doesn't think the girl is good enough for her son, VW has meddled in the love story between buyers and the Golf Cabriolet.

The first arrived in 1980 as a popular spin-off from the original Golf hatchback, revitalising the four-seat convertible market and finally killing off the much-loved vet outmoded original Beetle cabriolet.

Perhaps the original 'Golf Cab' was too successful, though, since old mother VW stuck her oar in and kept us waiting for a successor; version one soldiered on through the Mark 2 Golf hatchback period until VW finally allowed a replacement in 1993, based on the Mark 3 hatch, only to make this carry with minor updating before all contact between the Golf Cabrio and its adoring public was severed in 2002, when the new Beetle Cabrio arrived.

That was no substitute: the Golf soft-top had broad appeal, while its Beetle usurper flirted more with the female half of the population.

But the Golf's back now and more desirable than ever, with good looks and a production first for the series - no rollover bar.

Instead, retractable metal pillars spring out automatically behind the rear passenger seats to protect heads should the car roll in an accident.

It's an elegant and potentially expensive solution, yet VW has kept the car's entry price to an attractive £20,735 while making it highly desirable when top down, aided by a steeplyraked but reinforced front screen.

Unlike many soft-tops, the Golf also looks the part in roof-up mode where even motorway cruising reveals what a fantastic noise-reduction job VW has done. The current Golf hatchback came out in 2009 to set new standards in cabin refinement. OK, its 'ragtop' sister simply can't match the hatch here, but VW had a jolly good try and has set new standards for this sector.

VW GOLF CABRIO 2.0 TDI (140PS) SE BLUEMOTION: PRICE £22,260

How green?: Road tax: Best rival: Peugeot 308CC Kent dealers: Motorline Tunbridge Wells JCB Gillingham EuroCanterbury Perhaps even more surprising is how well

OPENED UP: VW has made sure the new Golf Cabriolet retains decent boot space while still being an attractive car in either roof-up or roof-down passengers fare with the roof down and side windows up – the buffeting is not unpleasant, even at motorway speeds - and the roof lowers and rises quickly and automatically via a single switch just below the armrest.

Of course, retaining a fabric roof means that security is not as good as that of a newgeneration folding hard-top model such as the Golf's Eos coupé sister, but it has kept the car's more reasonable price and retained decent boot space - the fabric roof packs down above the load area rather than taking up a good third or more when folded down.

The two rear seats also fold to allow through loading into the cabin – the car should cope with most reasonable trips to the local B&Q.

The dashboard is well made but sober, which adds to the car's unisex appeal, and the seats are comfortable, as I proved on a 200-mile-plus round trip. However, it's the Golf's traditionally sporty poise that tops its looks, practicality and the expectation of excellent resale value.

Our test car was the eco-star 140PS (138bhp) 2.0-litre BlueMotion (£24,660) capable of an official combined fuel consumption of 62.8mpg yet blessed with decent pulling power and handling, too (0-62mph in 9.9 seconds), but I would also recommend the petrol versions to exploit a nimbleness that contradicts the heavy strengthening needed in any convertible.

It means that with direct steering and smooth crisp gearboxes, including VW's excellent twinclutch auto/manual DSG – adding about £1,400 to prices versus conventional manuals - the Golf Cabrio can be driven with that sports-car

So it's a hearty welcome back to the Golf Cab and a plea to old mother Veedub - don't keep locking it away from us.

Skyactiv is go with new CX-5

MAZDA launches even more than its all-new CX-5 compact SUV in a couple of weeks' time

For the stylish newcomer (from £21,395) also pioneers the Japanese marque's Skyactiv technology to drive down fuel consumption and emissions. Emulating premium carmakers like BMW and Mercedes-Benz, Skyactiv is due across all future Mazda models, rather than being a sub-brand or premium option.

Rapid narrows gulf for Skoda

SKODA aims to plug the gap between its Fabia supermini and Octavia family model by launching a VW Golf/Ford Focus rival.

To be called the Rapid – a name last seen on a coupé version of the Estelle saloon built until 1990 – it's due here by late 2012 but already prompting speculation about a move upmarket and size for the next Octavia model.

Eco charms of new-look i20

HYUNDAI has launched a heavily-revised i20 supermini line-up priced below the important £10,000 benchmark

The new i20 model list (from £9,995) includes a road tax-exempt 1.1-litre diesel engine emitting just 84g/km CO2 and capable of an official combined fuel consumption of almost 90mpg. As ever, though, the Korean margue's standard five-year/unlimited-mileage warranty will also boost sales.

Toyota unveils new shrink-wrapped hybrid

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HAVING pioneered the hybrid car in the UK, Toyota is now taking orders for the smallest and most affordable.

The five-door petrol-electric Yaris Hybrid supermini arrives on Sunday, July 1, priced from £14,995 – not such a huge jump from its cheapest petrol-only Yaris equivalent at £11,670, though you can get a conventional Yaris three-door, too, from just £11,170.

With CO2 emissions from 89g/km, the new baby eco-warrior is exempt from road tax, delivers an official combined economy figure of up to 80.7mpg and attracts 10 per cent benefitin-kind company car tax.

It should appeal to Kent commuters into London particularly by also qualifying for exemption from the London congestion charge.

All of this has been achieved by Toyota shrinking the pioneering hybrid power system already seen on the Prius and smaller Auris hybrids, making it compact and light enough to fit the Yaris without reducing cabin and boot size and affecting its supermini functionality.

The Toyota Hybrid Synergy Drive system uses a 1.5-litre VVT-i petrol engine – the Prius and Auris use a 1.8-litre unit – plus electric motor and CVT (continuously variable transmission) automatic gearbox.

However, the powertrain is not the only reason for higher prices versus a standard Yaris; Toyota has also partnered the futuristic power with a generous spec, so even the T3 entry model (£14,995) comes with dual-zone air-con, six-speaker sound system, front electric windows and seven airbags.

Mid-range T4 (£15,895) then gets 15-inch alloys, Bluetooth and USB/Aux ports for MP3 and phone connectivity, leather steering-wheel and gearknob, plus a range of other fine goodies.

The T Spirit range flagship (£16,995) then

The T Spirit range llagship (£16,995) then gets 16-inch alloys, cruise-control, electric windows all round and part-leather seats, among other extra kit.

Buyers can also go for a series of option packs to further customise their car, including the Toyota Touch And Go pack (£650) adding satnav and advanced Bluetooth features, plus access to Google Local Search and connected services such as parking-space availability and fuel-price information and local weather forecasts.
